Editor’s Note

I. Teacher's Manual Structure 1.

Learning Objectives: Each lesson has a theme, and after completing the lesson, students will be able to express content related to the theme in Chinese.

2. Teaching Focus and Activity Design

(1) Warm-up activities: It is suggested that the teacher introduce the theme of this lesson as a warm-up activity. (2)

Vocabulary teaching:

a. Explain the meaning and scope of use of semantically complex words in this lesson. For example, words like "ÿ" (huán), "ÿ" (gÿi), and "ÿ" (huì) should only be practiced in the context of this lesson, without extending to other meanings and usages, to avoid overcomplication and confusion for students.

b. Distinguish between general vocabulary and phrases. A "phrase" is usually composed of several words, possessing a complete meaning, yet each word can be used independently. Examples include: ÿÿ (guì xìng), ÿÿ (nín ne), ÿÿÿ (nÿ guó rén), ÿÿÿ (tái rén). The phrase structure is "ÿ + ÿ" or "ÿÿ + ÿ". To facilitate learning for students and teaching for teachers, it is best to teach and practice phrases as a group. The English translation of vocabulary follows this approach, translating the meaning of the entire phrase when used.

c. Some words have morphemes that can be used separately (professor Deng Shouxin and many other scholars call them separable words). These words are mostly verb-object structures, such as "ÿÿ" (teach), "ÿÿ" (run), "ÿÿÿ" (watch TV), and "ÿ anymore" (play tennis). If the meanings of the verb and noun are complete, extensible, and frequently used, this textbook will list them as two words, such as "ÿ/ÿÿ" (watch/TV) and "ÿ/tennis". Otherwise, they will appear as whole words, such as "ÿÿ" (teach), "ÿÿ" (run), and "ÿÿ" (speak). The pinyin will indicate the verb-object structure (separable word structure) separately.

d. Explaining which words students are prone to misusing during learning, for teachers' reference.

e. Suggest the order in which teachers teach vocabulary.

(3) Grammar instruction:

a. Explain the meaning and key points of each grammar point. b.

Explain the grammatical meaning in the most easily understandable way, and demonstrate how to use the grammar with example sentences, followed by exercises. This will reinforce the grammar point. The selected grammar points are all very basic and frequently used.

(4) Text teaching:

a. List the key sentences for the lesson, and focus the teacher's instruction on these sentences. b. Suggest a teaching process for the class. A "segmented teaching" approach can be adopted, introducing the vocabulary and grammar of each segment sequentially. Vocabulary is introduced based on the teaching objectives, not necessarily in the order of the vocabulary list; some words listed later can be introduced earlier, but the quantity must be controlled. This segmented approach allows students to have diverse practice, including vocabulary, grammar, and dialogue from the text, in the first segment. The first segment can then be incorporated into the second segment using the same model for student interaction, following a spiral-upward concept in classroom teaching.

c. Provide questions for teaching the text to enhance interaction between teachers and students in the classroom.

Machine Translated by Google

(5) Comprehensive Activities:

a. Reading aloud and recognizing the text: The aim is to promote fluent speech and correct pronunciation, as well as strengthen the ability to recognize Chinese characters.

b. Completing sentences from the text: The aim is to reinforce the sentences in the text and practice writing Chinese characters. If you have difficulty writing Chinese characters, You can use Zhuyin Pinyin instead.

c. Communication Tasks and Activities: Practice listening and speaking through various authentic interactive activities. Some lessons also use... Use authentic materials to improve reading comprehension skills.

(6) Supplementary Teaching: Provide one or two supplementary practice materials for each lesson. Rewrite similar dialogues or short passages based on the vocabulary and grammar of the lesson for students to review. Teachers can use these as listening materials to train listening skills or as reading materials to improve reading ability.

(7) Phonetics instruction/phonetics review:

The entire book contains a complete phonics teaching system, teaching phonics step by step according to the course. Teachers can use this system to teach students pronunciation and symbols before starting the first lesson. Alternatively, teachers can teach a portion of the pronunciation and symbols each week according to the course schedule.

3. Textbook exercise answers: including answers to grammar exercises and integrated activities.

4. Workbook answers: including the text of the listening exercises.

5. Answer key to the test.

6. Website resource extensions: including stroke order website, Chinese character animations, and supplementary Chinese character activities. 7. One quiz paper.

8. Practice writing Chinese characters: List the Chinese characters that have not been practiced in the workbook.

II. Instructions for Using Workbooks

1. Text Comprehension: This assesses students' understanding of the lesson. It can be completed by the teacher in class or by students themselves. The student returned home to complete the task.

2. Listening Practice: Divided into two parts. The first part is distinguishing tones, and the second part is distinguishing Chinese characters, new words, and sentences, practicing from bottom to top. The teacher can play the recording in class, complete part of the exercises, and let students practice the rest at home. Alternatively, students can practice once in class and then again at home to strengthen their listening skills.

This textbook includes audio recordings that can be downloaded freely.

3. Reorganization Exercises: Reinforce sentence structure and grammar. 4. Matching Exercises: Train students' ability to respond correctly and appropriately through a question-and-answer format. 5. Picture Reading: Train students' sentence reading and comprehension skills using pictures. 6. Translation: Comprehensive overall practice. 7. Chinese Character Writing Practice: Each lesson in the workbook requires writing 15-17 Chinese characters. The rest are listed at the end of the teacher's manual.

Lesson 1

Hello

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Greeting Others

After completing this lesson, you will be able to:

1. Greet others in Chinese. 2.

Introduce yourself, your nationality, and ask others for relevant information.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: In the context of meeting students for the first time, use short dialogues to greet students, which can be accompanied by word cards and picture cards.

2. Sentences used: Hello. / My surname is [surname], and my given name is [name]. / I am a teacher.

I am a human being.

3. The sentences used can be written on the blackboard using pinyin (or not).

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. "ÿ"

(nín) is a respectful form of address for "you," generally used when meeting someone for the first time or with an elder. 2. "ÿÿ"

(guì xìng) is used when asking someone's surname upon first meeting them. It is not appropriate to use "ÿÿ" as a pretext.

He introduced his own surname.

3. "May I ask" is a polite form of address when asking others questions. Students should develop the habit of adding "May I ask" before their questions.

"Excuse me".

Machine Translated by Google

4. The character "ÿ" is a single character, and its original tone is fourth tone. However, it is listed as "ÿÿ" in the vocabulary list. When it is used as a word, the tone changes. Please mark it. Speak softly.

5. The phrase "Taiwan/Taiwan" is listed side-by-side in this book, indicating that both can be used, and teachers can choose which to use as needed. 6. The book's vocabulary is categorized under "phrases," emphasizing the communicative function of language. These are fixed structures and expressions that students can use immediately without being restricted by grammatical structures. For example, the phrase "ÿÿ" (guì xìng) is used together to ask someone's name, without distinguishing between the individual meanings of "ÿ" and "ÿ". This phrase does not need to be explained using a word-based teaching approach.

7. Regarding "ÿÿ" (Nín ne), it is suggested that this lesson begin by teaching it as a single vocabulary word, without explaining its meaning and function separately. A grammar explanation will be provided at the end of the book.

8. This book includes supplementary vocabulary as needed for exercises, which can also be used to expand vocabulary related to the text. For example: This... The lesson taught "you" and "me," and adding "he" allows teachers to use it flexibly during practice.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginners learning vocabulary, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, not solely outside the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize vocabulary, become familiar with usage, and solidify pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. Surname / Given Name

(1) "surname" is a verb and can only be followed by a surname.

S + Surname

My surname is Wang.

My last name is Lee.

(2) "ÿ" is a verb, which can be followed by a given name / first name or a full name. (name). Other uses of "ÿ" will not be explored in this lesson.

S + ÿ + given name / first name or full name

My name is Mingwen.

My name is Wang Mingwen.

(3) Use this sentence structure to fully introduce your name:

My given name is my surname + given name / first name.

My last name is Lee, and my given name is Gloria.

My surname is Wang, and my given name is Mingwen.

ÿCommon student mistakes: 1. S + "surname" + given name, such as: My surname is Mingwen.

2. I + "name" + surname, such as: My name is Wang.

Machine Translated by Google

2. Yes

"ÿ" is a verb, which can be followed by a given name/first name, a full name, or a nationality. Other uses of "ÿ" will not be explored in this lesson.

S + ÿ + given name / first name, full name, nationality

I am Mingwen.

I am Gloria Lee. I am from Taiwan.

ÿ Common student mistakes: S + "is" + surname, such as: I am Wang.

3. What

"ÿÿ" is an interrogative pronoun in Chinese. Interrogative sentences using interrogative pronouns have different word order than declarative sentences. The word order is exactly the same. In this lesson, "what name?" is an interrogative word used to ask someone's name or full name.

S + V + What name Question Pronoun

What's your name? (Interrogative sentence) My name is Wang Mingwen. (Declarative sentence)

ÿ The word order is the same for interrogative and declarative sentences.

S + V + What name/What question pronoun

What's his name?

What is Mingwen's surname?

ÿ Common student mistake: Students ask others for their names using English (native language) word order. For example: What is yours? name?

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. Hello!
2. What is your surname? 3. What is your name?
4. What is your nationality?

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from the perspectives of Wang Ming-wen and Gloria Lee (using images of people and national flags), reads aloud some sentences from the text. For example, "My surname is Wang, and my name is Ming-wen. I am Taiwanese." This introduces students to the key sentences of the lesson.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and then have the students repeat it together. Picture cards/word cards can be prepared to aid comprehension.

Machine Translated by Google

3. Incorporate grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts according to grammar and teach them in sequence. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly remember the pronunciation, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. For example: (1) Incorporate the dialogue into the context.

A: What is your surname?

B: My surname is Wang.

A: My last name is Lee, and my given name is Gloria. What is your first name?

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce the usage of grammar point 1 "surname/call" and the new word "your surname". Use questions to practice substitution, allowing students to confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation.

(4) Lead into the next part of the dialogue, introducing grammar points two and three, as well as other new words.

A: What's your name?

B: My name is Mingwen. May I ask what your nationality is?

A: I'm American. And you?

B: I am from Taiwan. (5) Summarize and review the grammar structure, Chinese characters and pronunciation with the students. 4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) What is Gloria's last name? (2) What is her nationality?

(3) What is Mingwen's surname?

(4) What is his nationality? Students are asked to answer the following questions based on their own information:

(5) What is your last name?

(6) What is your first name? (7) What is your nationality?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it individually in turns, and correct their pronunciation. 6. Using the content (facts) provided in the text, have students practice narration, thus achieving the learning objectives of this lesson.

To encourage students to develop monologue-style narration in addition to dialogue. (1) Have students work in pairs to introduce Wang Mingwen and Gloria using key sentences from this lesson. (2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or PPT, and students say the following:

a. Mingwen's surname is Wang.

b. Wang Mingwen is from Taiwan.

c. Gloria, surname Lee.

d. Gloria is an American.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

Machine Translated by Google

7. After completing the text instruction, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm grammatical structures.

8. After completing the grammar exercises, focus on explaining the complex structures or frequently misused characters.

The stroke order is displayed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Integrated Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin.

Pronunciation is correct.

(2) Method: a.

Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Integrated Activity Two (Fill in the blanks, writing)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after recitation, understand the content of the dialogue, and use Chinese characters or spelling.

Write out the missing parts using phonetic transcription.

(2) Method: a.

Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Writing Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the students' level. d. If students learn quickly and at a high level, supplementary activities can be used instead of the original activities, depending on time constraints. Procedure

Same as above.

A: Hello!

Byyyyy yyyyy

A: My surname is [surname]. May I ask your surname?

B: My surname is [surname], and my given name is [name]. May I ask what your given name is?

A: My name is [name]. May I ask what your nationality is?

B: I am a human being. What about...?

A: I am a human being.

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to introduce themselves and ask about others' names.

Country of Citizenship.

Machine Translated by Google

(2) Method: a.

Explain the activity method and remind students of the sentences to be used. b. After students complete the interviews, have them fill out a table and introduce the students they interviewed to the class.

c. Depending on the situation, students can be paired up and asked to complete the dialogue in front of the whole class. The dialogue content can be found in the comprehensive activity section.

Supplementary activities for the second activity.

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading) (1)

Objective: To provide authentic materials to train students to recognize Chinese names and distinguish between surnames and given names. (2)

Method:

a. Explain the activity format.

b. Have students find the names in the business cards themselves.

c. After the students finish, the teacher calls on a student to answer.

d. The teacher may then verbally ask students about the contents of their business cards.

VI. Supplementary Teaching of the Text

Depending on the situation, teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading skills.

Please answer the following questions based on the dialogue.

A: Hello.

B: Hello.

A: My surname is Wang. May I ask your surname?

B: My last name is Lee, and my given name is Steve. What is your name?

A: My name is Mingmei. I'm from Taiwan. And you?

B: I am American.

Question: 1.

What is Mingmei's surname?

2. What is Steve's last name?

3. What is Steve's nationality?

4. What is Mingmei's nationality?

Suggested answer:

1. King of the Myeongmi surname.

2. Steve, last name Lee.

3. Steve is an American.

4. Mingmei is from Taiwan.

Machine Translated by Google

VII. Phonetics Instruction/Phonetic Review This

textbook includes a phonetics system after each lesson. If students have not yet learned Chinese phonetic symbols, the teacher can...

These symbols should be taught step by step. If students have already learned the phonetic symbols, their pronunciations and spelling rules should be reviewed again.

1. Introduce Chinese syllables.

(1) Taking the new words in this lesson as an example, a Chinese character is a syllable. A syllable includes three parts: initial consonant, final vowel and tone. However, some syllables do not have an initial consonant.

(2) Demonstrate how to write tone marks. The tone marks are placed on the vowel. No tone marks are placed on the neutral tone.

2. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

Initials: b, p, m, f Finals: a, o, e, -i,

-u, -ü

3. For sounds and rhymes not found in this lesson, you can find vocabulary exercises from other lessons. Try to avoid using sounds and rhymes that do not exist in Chinese. To practice the four tones of a syllable, you may encounter syllables that do not exist in Chinese. This book will mark these with ( ), such as (mÿ), indicating that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese.

4. Use slides or flashcards to have students read sentences or words aloud and correct their pronunciation.

ÿ Teaching Reminders:

Teachers can flexibly adjust their teaching methods according to individual student situations or the teaching environment. If students are unwilling to learn Chinese characters, the teaching can first focus on listening, speaking, and reading, and then postpone the writing of Chinese characters. First, use Pinyin to practice pronunciation and sentence patterns to cultivate students' listening, speaking, and character recognition abilities. After allowing students to be exposed to Chinese characters without pressure, the writing of Chinese characters can be introduced a few lessons later, depending on the situation.

Lesson 2

I have two younger brothers

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Family After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1.

Describe family members and their number in Chinese. 2. Ask others if they have siblings.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method:

(1) The teacher asks questions, asking students to introduce themselves or other classmates' names and nationalities.

(2) Using pictures, introduce kinship terms. Kinship terms that are not new words in this lesson do not need to be emphasized, such as "father, father, father."

1. "Mom" can be used briefly. 2.

Sentences to use: He is (a kinship term). / His surname. / He is a person. _____ _____

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. "ÿ" indicates quantity and must be followed by a measure word. This lesson teaches "ÿÿ" first to help students naturally become accustomed to the expression and usage of "ÿ + measure word." The teacher does not need to explain the difference between "ÿ" and "ÿ" here; the difference will be explained when teaching numbers in

Lesson 7. 2. "ÿ/ÿ" are second-person pronouns, referring to men and women respectively, but "ÿ" can also be used to refer to women. They have the same pronunciation but different written forms. During teaching, pictures can be used, and sentences can be used to help students understand the difference between "ÿ/ÿ."

3. The vocabulary list for the character "ÿ" has three pronunciations marked. Please have the teacher explain the tone sandhi rules for "ÿ" in class.

Machine Translated by Google

4. In the kinship terms "brother," "sister," "younger brother," and "younger sister," the second character is pronounced in a neutral tone, and this is also marked in the vocabulary list. 5. "Sister" is listed alongside "elder sister" in the vocabulary list. Although "elder sister" is interchangeable with "sister" and is easier to write and used more frequently (e.g., in "Miss"), the standard "elder sister" will be used consistently in this textbook. Other grammatical examples will naturally include "elder sister" for students to recognize. Teachers can choose which to use depending on the situation.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginners, the vocabulary instruction should proceed from top to bottom, based on sentences, and not be taught separately from the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify their pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps. The kinship terms "older brother, older sister, younger brother, younger sister" in this lesson are nouns and belong to the same word group, making their concepts clear. They can be introduced separately during the warm-up activities.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. Yes / No

"ÿ" is a verb, and when used to express negation, adding "ÿ" before it results in "ÿÿ" (yÿu méi). "ÿ" is one of the two main negative adverbs in Chinese.

S + None (Negative Adverb) + Yes (V) + O (N)

I don't have a younger sister.

Gloria has no older brother.

Other adverbs in the sentence, such as "ÿ" and "ÿ", are placed before "ÿ/ÿÿ".

S + Adverb + No/Yes (V) + O (N) Gloria also has no younger brother.

Gloria has only one older sister.

2. Ma

"ÿ" is an interrogative particle. When added to the end of a complete declarative sentence, the sentence becomes an interrogative sentence.

Sentence + ÿÿ

Is your surname Wang?

S + V + O + ?

Are you American?

Is your name Mingwen?

"ÿ" is the most frequently used classifier. In Chinese, when expressing quantity, it must be placed between numbers and nouns. Add a measure word between them.

Numeral + Measure Word + N one younger sister

Machine Translated by Google

It should be emphasized that "ÿ" must be followed by a measure word. In a few cases, a measure word is not needed, which will not be explained in this lesson. If students ask about the difference between "ÿ" and "ÿ", just provide more practical examples and exercises to reinforce the concept of "ÿ + measure word". Do not analyze the grammar in an abstract way. Lesson 7 of this book will explain this.

ÿ Common student mistakes: Omission of quantifiers, such as: I have a younger brother.

4. Also

"ÿ" is an adverb that indicates that there is a situation similar to the one mentioned above in the content of the speech. In Chinese, adverbs must be placed after the subject and before the verb.

S + Adverb + V + O

I am also from Taiwan.

ÿ Common student errors: 1. Placing "ÿ" at the beginning of the sentence, such as: ÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ 2. Missing a verb, such as: ÿÿÿÿ ÿÿ 3. Omitting the elements following "ÿ", such as: ÿÿÿ

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. Do you have any siblings?
2. I have an older sister and two younger brothers.
3. I have neither an older brother nor a younger brother.
4. I only have one older sister.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from the perspectives of Wang Mingwen and Gloria Lee (using portraits and family photos), reads aloud some sentences from the text. For example, "I am Wang Mingwen. I have one older sister and two younger brothers." This introduces students to the key sentences of the lesson.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and then have the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to aid comprehension.

3. Incorporate Grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts based on grammar and teach them sequentially. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly memorize the pronunciation, then reinforce individual grammatical structures and new vocabulary. For example:

(1) Pair the dialogue with the context.

A: Mingwen, do you have any siblings?

B: I have one older sister and two younger brothers.

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce the usage of grammar 1 "have/have not" and new words "brothers and sisters, older brother, older sister, younger brother, younger sister" in turn. Use questions to practice substitution, allowing students to confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation.

Machine Translated by Google

(4) Summarize and review the grammar structure, Chinese characters and pronunciation with the students.

(5) Introduce the following dialogue in sequence, along with grammar two "ÿ", grammar three "ÿ", and other content.

4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Does Mingwen have any siblings?

(2) Does Mingwen have an older brother and a younger sister?

(3) Does Gloria have any siblings? (4) Mingwen has an older sister, but what about Gloria?

(5) Does Gloria have an older brother or a younger brother?

Students are asked to answer the following questions based on their own experience:

(6) I have an older brother/older sister/younger brother/younger sister, what about you?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it individually in turns, and correct their pronunciation. 6. Using the content (facts) provided in the text, have students practice narration, thus achieving the learning objectives of this lesson.

To encourage students to develop monologue-style narration in addition to dialogue. (1) Have students work in pairs to introduce Wang Mingwen and Gloria's siblings using key sentences from this lesson. (2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or a PowerPoint presentation, and students say the following:

a. Wang Mingwen has one older sister and two younger brothers.

b. Gloria has neither an older brother nor a younger brother.

c. Gloria has only one older sister.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

7. After completing the text instruction, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm grammatical structures. 8. After completing the grammar exercises, focus on explaining the complex structures or frequently misused characters.

The stroke order is displayed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Integrated Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to read sentences in the dialogue and pronounce them correctly without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin. (2) Method:

a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups. b.

The teacher calls on students to take turns reading the dialogue aloud.

2. Integrated Activity Two (Fill in the blanks, writing)

(1) Objective: Students can memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after reciting them, understand the content of the dialogue, and write out the missing parts using Chinese characters or pinyin.

Machine Translated by Google

(2) Method: a.

Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Write Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level.

d. Supplementary activities can be arranged if time permits. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so supplementary activities are appropriate.

Replace the original activity. The process is the same as above.

Supplementary activity (allow students to add or remove sentences according to their own situation)

A: Do you have one?_____

B: I have one. What about you?_____ _____

A: Me. _____

B: Do you have it?

A: Me too, I have it. _____ _____ _____

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to describe and inquire about whether they have siblings or how many siblings

they have. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind you of the sentences to be used.

b. After completing the interviews, have the students fill out a form and introduce the students they interviewed to the class.

c. Depending on the situation, select students to complete the dialogue in front of the whole class. See the supplement to Integrated Activity Two for the dialogue content.

Activity.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the short passages aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Please answer the following questions based on the passage.

Steve has two older brothers and one younger sister. Wang Mingmei also has one younger sister. Wang Mingmei has no older sisters or brothers. Mingmei only has one younger sister.

question:

1. Does Steve have an older brother?

2. Does Steve have a sister?

3. Does Akemi have a younger sister?

4. Does Mingmei have any older brothers or sisters?

Machine Translated by Google

Suggested answer:

1. Steve has two older brothers.
2. Steve has a younger sister.
3. Akemi also has a younger sister.
4. Mingmei has no older brother or sister.

VII. Phonetics Teaching / Phonetics Review

1. How to mark tone marks.

(1) When marking tone marks, if the final is i, the dot above i should be removed before marking the tone. For example:

dì (younger brother)

(2) Tone marks are placed on the main vowels, and the order of the main vowels is aoeiu ü. For example: mèi (ÿ), hÿo (ÿ)

2. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

Initials: d, t, n, l; Finals:

ao, ei

3. For sounds and rhymes not found in this lesson, you can find vocabulary exercises from other lessons. Try to avoid using sounds and rhymes that do not exist in Chinese. To practice the four tones of a syllable, you may encounter syllables that do not exist in Chinese. This book will mark these with ( ), such as (nÿ), (lÿ), (mÿi), indicating that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese.

4. Use slides or flashcards to have students read sentences or words aloud and correct their pronunciation.

http://stroke-order.learningweb.moe.edu.tw/home.do (1) Stroke order: For students who are new to Chinese characters, the new words "ÿÿÿÿÿ" are easy to make mistakes in stroke order. Teachers can demonstrate the writing stroke order in class.

(2) Structure: Write the following Chinese characters on the blackboard (or on a slide) and have the students discuss and find the characters with the same components. This activity can be increased depending on the students' level and time. The teacher should explain less during the process and let the students discuss and find the answers visually as much as possible.

Lesson 3

She is not a student.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Careers I After

completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Ask someone if they are a student. 2. Ask someone about their occupation and workplace. 3. Introduce your own and your family's marital status.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Methods: (1) Review kinship terms with pictures, and introduce "son" and "daughter". (2) Review the grammar of Lesson 2 and ask students about their family members and number. (3) Introduce "student" with pictures and ask students if their siblings are students.

2. Sentences used: Do you have (siblings)? / Are you (your siblings) students?

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. "She/

He" is a third-person pronoun, referring to both men and women, but "He" can also be used to refer to women.

They have the same pronunciation but different written forms.

2. "Where" is an interrogative pronoun in Chinese, used when asking about a location. The word order in Chinese interrogative sentences differs from that in declarative sentences.

The word order is exactly the same. "ÿÿ" and "ÿÿ" have the same meaning and usage.

3. The grammatical structures of "graduated" and "got married" are relatively difficult for beginners, but they are highly practical. Therefore, this lesson will not explain the structure or the usage of "ÿ". Instead, the phrases will be listed directly after pairing. Teachers are requested to use the entire phrase directly.

Machine Translated by Google

In language teaching, practice by substituting the subject. If a student says "unmarried" or "not graduated," the teacher should replace it with "not married" or "not graduated," without further explanation.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation and leveraging previously learned structures to introduce new words. Additionally, incorporating word groups into teaching activities can reinforce student recall. Examples include: son, daughter, child, kid/student, university, primary school/bank, computer company, etc.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. No

"ÿ" is one of the two main negative adverbs in Chinese. When "ÿ" is placed next to a verb (such as "ÿ" or "ÿ"), it indicates negation. Before "ÿ" (jiào), there is a negative sentence. For example:

I am not American.

My name is not Mary.

2. In Chinese word order: S(N) + ÿ + place + V + (O), “ÿ” is a preposition followed by “ÿÿ”, indicating the workplace.

S(N) + in + place + V + (O)

I work at a computer company.

He works at a bank.

ÿ Common Student Errors: Students may be influenced by their native language and place locative phrases led by "ÿ" in the wrong position, such as at the end of the sentence. Teachers should demonstrate and practice more, avoiding explanation. If students do not produce the incorrect sentence, there is no need to point it out.

3. When using the "ÿ" (dÿu) clause in a sentence, "ÿ" must precede the verb. The people or things referred to by "ÿ" must be numerous and mentioned in the preceding text or sentence. For example:

(1) S(N majority) + all + V + (O)

John and Mary are both students.

Gloria and Mary both have the last name

Lee. (2) To form a negative sentence, add "not" before the verb, such as: S (N majority) + all + not + V + (O)

Neither John nor Mary has the last name Lee.

Neither of them are students. ÿ

Common student error: Placing "ÿ" (dÿu) at the beginning of the sentence, such as: ÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ (dÿu tÿ mÿ shì xué shÿng).

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. My sister is not a student.
2. My sister works at a bank.
3. My sister got married.
4. Both children are in primary school.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from Gloria Lee's perspective (which can be accompanied by a portrait and family photos), says some sentences from the text. For example: "I am Gloria. My sister is not a student, she works at a bank. My sister is married. Both of her children are in primary school." This introduces students to the key sentences of the lesson. 2. The teacher leads the reading of the text, and the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to help understand the text. 3. Introduce grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts according to grammar and teach them in sequence. First, let the students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly remember the pronunciation, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. For example: (1) Introduce the dialogue with context.

A: Gloria, is your sister a student?

B: She's not a student; she's graduated from university.

(2) Teacher-student Q&A to help students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and pronunciation. (3) Introduce grammar point 1 "ÿ" (bù) and new words "ÿÿ" (xuéshÿng), "ÿÿ" (dàxué), "ÿÿÿ" (bèiyÿ) in sequence. Use questioning as a substitution exercise to help students confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation. (4) Summarize and review grammatical structures, Chinese characters, and pronunciation with students. (5) Introduce the following dialogue, grammar point 2 "ÿ" (zài), grammar point 3 "ÿ" (dÿu), and other new words in sequence.

4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Is her sister a student? (2) Has her sister graduated from university?

(3) Where does her sister work?

(4) Is her sister married? (5) Does her sister have children? (6) Where do both children study?

Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (8) Do you have any siblings?

(9) Has your older brother/sister graduated from university?

(10) Where does your older brother/sister work?

Machine Translated by Google

(11) Is your brother/sister married? (12) Do they have children? (13) Where do they study?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read the text aloud individually in turn, and correct their pronunciation.

6. Using the content (facts) provided in the text, have students complete narrative exercises based on what they have learned, in order to achieve the learning objectives of this lesson.

The goal is to enable students to develop a monologue-style narrative ability in addition to dialogue.

(1) Have students work in pairs to introduce Gloria's sister's job and family using the key sentences of this lesson. (2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or PPT, and asks students to say the following: a. Gloria's sister is not a student.

b. She works at a bank.

c. She got married.

d. He has two children, a son and a daughter.

e. Both children are in primary school. (The teacher may add or remove items from the above content depending on the students' level or situation.) (3) The students have not yet learned the structure "Gloria's older sister". The teacher may use the students' native language (English) as appropriate.

Additional explanation.

7. After completing the text instruction, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm grammatical structures. 8. After completing the grammar exercises, focus on explaining the complex structures or frequently misused characters.

The stroke order is displayed.

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading)

(1) Objective: To provide authentic materials to train students to identify workplaces, as well as Chinese surnames and given names. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format.

b. Have students find the work location and name on the business card themselves.

c. After the students finish, the teacher calls on a student to answer. d. The teacher may then verbally ask the student about the contents of their business card.

VI. Supplementary Teaching: Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the short passage aloud to train students' listening skills, or create handouts for reading practice. Based on the content of the short passage, please determine whether the following statements are correct.

Steve isn't a student; he graduated from college and is married. He works at a computer company. Steve has two... The children are a son and a daughter. They are both in elementary school.

VII. Phonetics Teaching / Phonetics Review 1.

Tone Sandhi.

When two syllables with third tones are together, the first syllable with a third tone should be pronounced with a second tone, such as in: ÿÿ (hello), ÿÿ (I have).

However, when marking the tone mark, the original third tone should still be marked, such as: ÿÿ (nÿ hÿo), ÿ ÿ (wÿ yÿu).

2. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

Initials: g, k, h Finals:

ai, -uo, ang (1) -uo is written as wo when there is no initial before it. For example: wÿ (ÿ). (2)

When the final i+ang is not preceded by an initial, i is written as y, such as yÿng (ÿ).

3. For sounds and rhymes not found in this lesson, you can find vocabulary exercises from other lessons. Try to avoid using sounds and rhymes that do not exist in Chinese. To practice the four tones of a certain syllable, you may encounter syllables that do not exist in Chinese. This book will mark these with ( ), such as (ká), (kái), (hÿng), (wó), indicating that the syllable does not exist in Chinese.

4. Use slides or flashcards to have students read sentences or words aloud and correct their pronunciation.

(1) Stroke order: Students who are new to Chinese characters are prone to making stroke order mistakes with the new words "ÿ, ÿ, ÿ, ÿ". Teachers can demonstrate the stroke order in class.

(2) Structure: Write the following Chinese characters on the blackboard (or on a slide) and have the students discuss and find other characters with the same structure. This activity can be added depending on the students' level and time. The teacher should explain as little as possible and let the students discuss and find the answers visually. Culture Unit (I)

Kinship terms

Why is Wang Mingmei Wang Mingwen's "cousin" but Zhang An'an his "cousin"? In ancient China, large families were common, and most relatives lived together. Furthermore, Chinese people valued kinship and hierarchical relationships. Although all were family, each person had a different role within the family, and each person had specific terms of address for each other (relatives). Using these different terms allowed outsiders to distinguish their relationships. For example, terms for family members related to the father include: grandfather is "father's father," grandmother is "father's mother," uncle is "father's brother," aunt is "father's sister." Similarly, terms for family members related to the mother include: maternal grandfather is "mother's father," maternal grandmother is "mother's mother," uncle is "mother's brother," and aunt is "mother's sister." Therefore, my uncles' sons and daughters are my "cousins," while my aunts' sons and daughters are my "cousins."

Lesson 4

My dad works at a computer company.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Career II After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Talk about your own life in Chinese. 2.

Recognize more vocabulary related to professions and workplaces.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method:

(1) Use pictures to guide students in reading the job titles in L3 and L4. The teacher may add supplementary vocabulary in Integrated Activity 3 as needed. (2) Review the grammar of Lessons 2 and 3, and talk with students about family members and work situations.

2. Sentences used: I have one. / He is. / He is at work. 3. Depending on students' learning progress, contextualization can be considered. Here, the "A not A" or "ÿ" structures can be introduced first.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. The adverb "ÿ" (hÿn) followed by an adjective, such as "ÿÿ" (hÿn hÿn), "ÿÿ" (hÿn máng), "ÿÿ" (hÿn lÿi), does not intensify the degree. Common grammatical errors students make include: A: Are you busy? B: *I'm busy. / A: Are you tired today? B: *I'm tired. Sentences without "ÿ" are often used in comparative sentences, such as: I'm busy, he's even busier.

2. "Like" can be followed by a noun, such as: He likes children. It can also be followed by a verb, such as: He likes teaching. Because students are learning this word for the first time, we don't teach them the simplified expression "like or dislike," to avoid confusion.

Machine Translated by Google

3. "Teaching" refers to work, but "book" in the structure is an abstract concept, not referring to actual books, and cannot be separated from the verb "teach" in meaning. Comparing "He teaches" and "He teaches this book," the latter sentence uses "book" in a concrete sense. Therefore, the vocabulary list for this lesson includes "teach" separately after "teach". 4. Nouns indicating time, such as "every day" and "today," are generally placed after the subject and before the verb. 5. "French" may be used to introduce "Chinese," "English," and the students' native language depending on the needs of the lesson.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, rather than teaching solely outside the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize vocabulary, become familiar with usage, and solidify pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps. The kinship terms "father, mother, teacher, child" in this lesson are nouns with simple concepts and can be introduced separately during the warm-up activities.

III. Grammar Teaching 1.

Yes/No Questions with the "A not A" Structure

In Chinese, yes/no questions can be formed using the affirmative or negative form of the verb "A not A" in addition to the interrogative particle "ÿ". The forms of "ÿ" and "A not A" questions are interchangeable, but the questioning stance of "A not A" questions is neutral, while "ÿ" questions often already have a pre-set answer.

1-1 S + Vs + ÿ + Vs

Are you busy?

S + V + not + V + O

Are you a student?

1-2 S. + Yes + No + N?

The negative form of the verb "ÿ" is "ÿÿ" (yÿu méi), and the interrogative form is "ÿÿ" (mÿu méi). For example:

Do you have a computer?

Does your brother have children?

ÿ Common student mistake: Using "A not A" and "ÿ" interchangeably, for example:

Are you a teacher? Do you have an older brother?

2.ÿ

"ÿ" is an interrogative particle placed after a noun or pronoun to shorten a question. The answer to this question can be gleaned from previous conversations. For example:

What about S1 + V + N, and S2 +?

My name is Xiaowen. What's yours? I have a younger brother. What's yours?

Machine Translated by Google

3. Indicates possession or ownership.

3-1

The particle "ÿ" placed between two words (pronoun or noun) indicates possession or ownership, for example:

My computer

His work

3-2

The phrase "ÿ" indicating possession or ownership can be omitted when the noun following a personal pronoun refers to a family member or a close relative. For example:

My mother

When using the phrase "ÿ" to indicate possession or ownership, the "ÿ" cannot be omitted after a regular noun. For example:

Mingwen's mother

Jiawen's father

ÿ Common student mistakes: Students may be influenced by their mother tongue and may misplace the two words before and after "ÿ" in phrases.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. He is very busy with work. 2. He is tired every day. 3.

She likes children.

4. She said teaching is not tiring.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from Wang Mingwen's perspective, introduces his parents' work situation (with pictures), and recites some sentences from the text. For example, "My dad works at a computer company. He's very busy, and he's tired every day." This introduces students to the key sentences of the lesson.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Contextual picture cards can be prepared to help students understand the text. 3. Introduce grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts according to grammar and teach them in sequence. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly remember the pronunciation, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. For example: (1) Introduce the dialogue with context.

A: Mingwen, may I ask where your father and mother work?

B: My dad works at a computer company, and my mom is a primary school teacher.

A: Is your dad busy with work?

B: He's very busy with work, and he's tired every day.

Machine Translated by Google

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Grammar 1 "A not A", new words "dad, mom, teacher, every day, busy, tired", and the structure of "very Vs" are introduced in turn. Substitution exercises are conducted by asking questions to help students confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation.

(4) Summarize and review the dialogue, grammatical structure, and pronunciation with the students. (5) Then, introduce other dialogues, grammar point 2 "ne", grammar point 3 "de", vocabulary, and the text in sequence. content.

4. After teaching the dialogue content, read the text aloud again and ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Where do Mingwen's parents work? (2) Is his father busy at work? Is he tired?

(3) What about his mother?

(4) Does his mother like children? (5) What did his mother say?

(6) Where does Gloria's father work? (7) What does he teach at the university? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation:

(8) Where do your father and mother work? (9) Is your father busy at work? Is he tired? (10) Where do your siblings work? Are they busy? (11) Do you like children? (12) Do you like teaching? 5. Have students practice reading the text in groups, and then have students read the text individually in turn, and correct their pronunciation.

6. Using the content (facts) provided in the text, have students complete narrative exercises based on what they have learned, in order to achieve the learning objectives of this lesson.

To encourage students to develop monologue-style narration in addition to dialogue. (1) Have students work in pairs to introduce the work of Wang Mingwen's parents using key sentences from this lesson. (2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or PPT, and asks students to say the following:

a. Wang Mingwen's father works at a computer company. b. His work is very busy, and he is tired every day. c. Wang Mingwen's mother is a primary school teacher.

d. She really likes children, and she says teaching isn't tiring.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

7. After the lesson is completed, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm the grammatical structure.

8. After completing the grammar exercises, you can focus on explaining the complex structures of several Chinese characters or those that students frequently misunderstand. The stroke order is displayed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Integrated Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to read sentences in the dialogue and pronounce them correctly without the use of phonetic symbols and pinyin.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Integrated Activity Two (Fill in the blanks, writing)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson, understand the dialogue, and write the missing characters or pinyin.

The small portion.

(2) Method: a.

Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Writing Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level. d.

Supplementary activities can be arranged if time permits. Supplementary activities can be arranged for students who learn quickly and at a high level.

Replace the original activity. The process is the same as above.

Supplementary activity (allow students to add or remove sentences according to their own situation)

A: Excuse me, are you at work?

B: I'm at work. _____

A: Is it your job? _____ _____

B: His job, he does it every day. _____

A: What about you?

B: I am here, and he is. _____ _____ _____

A: You don't? _____ _____ _____

B: I like it, but he says no. _____ _____ _____

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to explain and ask questions about themselves, others, and their families.

Work situation and life.

(2) Method:

a. Using pictures as a guide, read aloud, understand, and supplement the vocabulary.

b. Explain the activity format and remind students of the sentences to use. c. After students complete their interviews, have them fill out a table and introduce the students they interviewed to the class. d. If necessary, ask students to complete a dialogue in front of the class. The dialogue content can refer to the supplementary activity in Activity Two; the teacher can modify the dialogue format as needed.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading)

(1) Objective: Provide pictures and see if students can say and understand the meaning of Chinese kinship terms. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format.

b. Let students look at the pictures and answer the questions themselves.

c. After students complete the task, the teacher calls on students to answer.

d. The teacher may then ask students oral questions based on the picture.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

I. Please read the dialogue first, and then answer the following questions.

A: Mingmei, may I ask where your father and mother work?

B: My dad is a university professor, and my mom works at a bank.

A: Is your dad busy with work?

B: He enjoys teaching, and he says he's not busy with work.

A: Where is your mother?

B: She said she was very busy with work and very tired.

Answer the following questions:

1. Where does Mingmei's father work?
2. Where does Mingmei's mother work?
3. Is Mingmei's father busy with work?
4. Is Mingmei's mother busy with work? Is she tired?

Suggested answer:

1. Her father teaches at a university. / Her father is a university professor.
2. Her mother works at a bank.
3. Her father isn't busy.
4. Her mother is very busy and tired.

II. Please read the passage first, and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

John's father is a doctor, and his mother works at a bank. John has an older brother, an older sister, and a younger sister. His brother is a primary school teacher, his sister works at a computer company, and his sister is a student. John is a teacher; he teaches at a university, and he is very busy and tired every day.

Machine Translated by Google

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. John's father and mother both work at a bank.

( )2. John's brother teaches at the school.

( ) 3. John's sister graduated from college.

( ) 4. John is tired every day.

Answer: XOXO

VII. Phonetics Instruction/Phonics Review

1. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

Initials: z, c, s; Finals: ou, -ua, -ong

(1) When -ua is not preceded by an initial consonant, it is written as wa. For example: wÿ (dig). (2) When the final i + ong is not preceded by an initial consonant, i is written as y, for example: yòng (use).

2. Tone Sandhi of "ÿ".

The tone of "ÿ" changes with the tone of the following syllable. If the following syllable is a first, second, or third tone, the tone of "ÿ" is pronounced and marked as the fourth tone, for example: bù gÿngzuò (not working), bù máng (not busy), bù hÿo (not good); if the following syllable is a fourth tone, the tone of "ÿ" is pronounced and marked as the second tone, for example: bù shì (not).

3. For sounds and rhymes not found in this lesson, you can find vocabulary exercises from other lessons. Try to avoid using sounds and rhymes that do not exist in Chinese. To practice the four tones of a certain syllable, you may encounter syllables that do not exist in Chinese. This book will mark these with ( ), such as (zí), (sá), (zuÿ), (sóng), indicating that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese.

4. Use slides or flashcards to have students read sentences or words aloud and correct their pronunciation.

(1) Stroke order: Students who are new to learning Chinese characters are prone to making stroke order mistakes with the new words "ÿ", "ÿ", "ÿ", and "ÿ". Teachers can demonstrate the stroke order in class.

(2) Structure: Write the following Chinese characters on the blackboard (or on a slide) and have the students discuss and find characters with the same structure. This activity can be added depending on the students' level and time. The teacher should explain less during the process and let the students discuss and find the answer visually as much as possible.

Which of the following Chinese characters can be placed into the structures shown below?

Parents and teachers often like to talk about Li Shujiao when they're busy.

Lesson 5

Welcome!

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Meeting New Friends

After completing this lesson, you will be able to:

1. Introduce others to your friends. 2. Express friendliness to your friends. 3. Discuss holiday plans.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: Review the grammar of Lessons 3 and 4, and talk with students about the work and life of their family members.

2. Sentence structure used: S (person) + at + (place) + V (O). / S (person) (Vs) not (Vs)? / S (person) is (Vs). / S (person) is not (Vs). 3. Depending on the students' learning progress, lead them in reading the supplementary vocabulary from Integrated Activity Four, introducing "S lives" first. structure.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1.

"Pingchang" (ÿ), an adverb indicating frequency, is generally placed after the subject and before the verb.

2. "Xiang" (ÿ), an auxiliary verb indicating personal intention or plan. Pay attention to whether students mistakenly use it interchangeably with "xiangxin" (ÿÿ).

Comparison: I want to go to Disneyland. / I like going to Disneyland.

3. The word "to know" is introduced through the greeting sentences in this lesson. Students are encouraged to repeatedly engage in introduction and response dialogues. A says, "This is...", and B says, "It's nice to meet you/It's nice to meet you." The purpose of using "It's nice to meet you/It's nice to meet you" in this lesson is to encourage students to use different expressions; both are acceptable sentences.

Machine Translated by Google

4. This lesson introduces two new words, "ÿ" (lái, to come) and "ÿ" (qù, to go), starting with the simplest single-direction words. The teacher should emphasize practicing the directionality of actions to lay a foundation for learning more complex directional verbs later, such as "ÿ" (lái, to come in) and "ÿ" (jìn, to go in).

5. The term "holiday" has a broad scope; this lesson focuses on students' holidays. If all students are working professionals, then... The term "holiday" can be used to refer to holidays for national festivals.

6. For the word "country," the teacher can practice the names of several countries, using the supplementary vocabulary from Integrated Activity Four. When practicing the grammar point "to live," these country names can be substituted.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, rather than teaching in isolation from the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify their pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps.

III. Grammar Teaching 1. This is + Personal Relationship, name

This sentence structure is generally used when introducing someone for the first time or when they get to know each other; it's a colloquial expression. For example:

This is my younger brother.

This is my younger brother, Wang Jiawen.

2. S + ÿÿ (live in, at) + Place Word

"ÿ" is a preposition followed by "ÿÿ" (place/location). This sentence structure indicates that someone lives in a certain place. For example: He lives in Taiwan. If an adverb is present, it is placed before "ÿ" (to live). For example:

S + Adv + live in + place

He does not live in Taiwan.

He usually lives in Taipei.

3. Question Pronouns: what, where (where), who

When using interrogative pronouns such as "what," "where," or "who" to form a question, simply replace the part of the statement you are asking about with the appropriate interrogative pronoun.

Question: What's his name?

Answer: His name is Wang Xiaowen. (Declarative sentence)

4. S + (Vaux) + Go + Place Word + V (action)

The word "go" is placed before a location, followed by a verb, to indicate: to think of that place. To do something. For example:

S + (Vaux) + go + Place Word + V I want to study in France.

Machine Translated by Google

ÿ Common student errors: When using "ÿ" (qù) or "ÿ" (lái), the speaker's location should be the reference point. For example, "I'm going to America for fun," the speaker is not currently in America. "I'm coming to America for fun," the speaker is currently in America. Teachers should pay attention to this type of error.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. This is my younger brother, Wang Jiawen.

2. I usually live in Taiwan.

3. School is on holiday now, so I've come to the United States for a trip.

4. I want to go to Disneyland.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from Wang Mingwen's perspective, introduces his younger brother Wang Jiawen (with pictures), and recites some sentences from the text. For example: "This is my younger brother, Wang Jiawen. He usually lives in Taiwan, but he's on school holiday now, so he's come to America for a trip. He wants to go to Disneyland," etc., allowing students to encounter key sentences from the lesson.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and then have the students repeat it together. Contextual picture cards can be prepared to aid comprehension.

3. Incorporate Grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts based on grammar and teach them sequentially. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly memorize the pronunciation, then reinforce individual grammatical structures and new vocabulary. For example:

(1) Pair the dialogue with the context.

Wang Mingwen: Gloria, long time no see.

Hello Gloria, it's been a long time.

Wang Mingwen: This is my younger brother, Wang Jiawen. Jiawen, this is my friend, Gloria.

Gloria: Hello, Jiawen, it's nice to meet you.

Wang Jiawen: Gloria, it's nice to meet you too. (2) Teacher-student

Q&A helps students become familiar with the sentence, memorize its meaning, and pronounce it.

(3) Grammar 1 "This is + Personal Relationship, name", the vocabulary in this part of the dialogue, and the usage scenarios of "long time no see" and "it's nice to meet you / it's nice to meet you". Use questions as substitution exercises to help students confirm the grammatical structure and pay attention to pronunciation.

(4) Summarize and review the dialogue, grammar structure, and pronunciation with the students. (5) Introduce the dialogue, grammar, and vocabulary of other texts in sequence. 4.

After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Who is Jiawen?

(2) Does Gloria know Jiawen?

Machine Translated by Google

(3) Where does Jiawen study? (4) Where does

Jiawen usually live? (5) Where does Mingwen live

VII. Phonetics Instruction/Phonics Review

1. This lesson introduces

Pinyin. Initials: j, q, x;

Finals: -iu (iou), -iao, -eng

(1) When the initial consonant before -ü is j, q, or x, it is rewritten as u. For example: qù (ÿ).

(2) Referring to the explanation in Lesson 2, the order of tone marks is ao, ei, u, ü, but there is one exception.

The -iu should be marked as –iÿ. For example: jiÿ (ÿ). (3) When there is no initial consonant before -iu, it is written as you. For example: yÿu (ÿ). (4) When there is no initial consonant before -iao, it is written as yao. For example: yào (ÿ).

2. For phonological combinations not found in this lesson, you can find vocabulary exercises from other lessons. Try to avoid using phonological combinations that do not exist in Chinese. To practice the four tones of a syllable, syllables that do not exist in Chinese may appear. This book will mark them with ( ), such as (jiú).

Lesson Six

What do you usually like to do?

I. arning Objectives

Subject: Leisure and Hobbies

After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Name common leisure activities. 2. Ask others about their leisure hobbies. 3. Talk to others about your favorite activities. 4. Describe your own daily activities.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: Use pictures to familiarize students with the terms for common leisure activities, and talk with students about their leisure activities. Leisure hobbies.

2. Sentences used: Does S like V or not? / S (does not) like V.

3. Depending on the students' learning progress, add the supplementary vocabulary from Integrated Activity 3 to the exercises.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. When asking "What do you do?", a common mistake students make is to retain the word "do" in the question and add a verb after it, for example: A: What do you like to do? B: *I like to sing. 2. "and" is a conjunction that can connect two equivalent nouns or verb phrases, but it cannot connect sentences, for example: I like to listen to music, *and my younger brother also likes to listen to music.

3. The character "ÿ" is marked with two pronunciations. According to the standard pronunciation of the Ministry of Education in Taiwan, it is "ÿÿÿ", which is also commonly heard. The pronunciation of "ÿÿÿ". The teacher will explain and choose according to the situation.

Machine Translated by Google

4. The negation of "ÿ" (cháng cháng) is "ÿÿ" (bù cháng).

5. There are two reasons why "ÿÿ" (chàng gÿ), "ÿÿ" (pÿng chí), and "ÿ" (wÿ yÿu) are listed as phrases in this lesson. First, the verbs and nouns can be used separately (Professor Deng Shouxin calls these separable words), such as: ÿÿÿÿ (chàng shénme gÿ), ÿÿÿÿÿ (pÿo yè xiÿo shí), etc. Second, "ÿÿÿÿÿ" (gÿ, bù, wÿ) are not commonly used alone, therefore they appear as phrases. While "ÿtenán" (dÿ tÿn), "ÿÿÿ" (tÿng yÿnyuè), and "ÿÿÿ" (kàn diàn shì) are also words where the verb and noun can be separated, "ÿÿÿÿÿ" (dÿ, tÿng, kàn) are used more frequently, and the nouns "tennis," "music," and "television" can all be used alone, therefore they are divided into two separate vocabulary words.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, not solely outside the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps. When introducing vocabulary related to leisure activities, the concept of verb-object structures in Chinese can be incorporated, for example: playing tennis, listening to music, watching television.

III. Grammar Teaching 1. The adverb

"ÿ" (hái) connects two actions or situations with the same subject. Besides the first action or situation already mentioned or known, "ÿ" adds an action or situation unknown to the listener. Note that when using "ÿ," the auxiliary verb or verb from the previous sentence must be repeated. For example:

S + Vaux + V1 + O1, also + Vaux + V2 + O2

I like listening to music and I also like singing. (Repeated "like") He likes running and he also likes playing tennis.

ÿ Common student mistakes: Omitting the verb after "ÿ" (hái), such as: *I like listening to music and singing.

2. S + Time Word + Place + V (O) In Lesson 3 we learned "S (N) + Place + V + (O)", now we add time. For example: Wang Mingwen played tennis in the park in the morning.

ÿ Common Student Mistakes: Be aware that students may be influenced by their native language and place phrases indicating time and place incorrectly, such as putting "morning" at the end of a sentence (e.g., Wang Mingwen played tennis in the park in the morning). Teachers should demonstrate and practice with complete sentences rather than providing explanations.

3. The position of the adverbs "ÿ" and "ÿ" in a sentence

In Chinese, adverbs always precede verbs, but when both "ÿ" and "ÿ" are used in the same sentence, "ÿ" is placed before "ÿ". For example:

(1) None of us have younger brothers.

(2) I have a younger brother, and they all have younger brothers.

Machine Translated by Google

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. He usually likes running. 2. My brother and I also like singing, but neither of us likes dancing. 3. I also like watching TV. 4. I often watch TV at home in the evenings.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from Wang Jiawen's perspective, introduces his brother Wang Mingwen and his own hobbies (with pictures), and recites some sentences from the text. For example: "I like sports, and I usually like to run. My brother usually likes to run and likes to play tennis on weekends. My brother and I also like to sing, but neither of us likes to dance." This introduces students to the key sentences of the lesson. 2. The teacher leads the class in reading the text aloud, and the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to help students understand the text. 3. Grammar introduction: Divide the dialogue into several parts according to grammar and teach them in sequence. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly remember the pronunciation, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. For example: (1) Introduce the dialogue with context. This part practices the positions of "like + sports, dislike + sports" and "usually, weekends".

A: Jiawen, do you like sports?

B: I like sports, and I usually like to run.

A: What does your brother usually like to do?

B: He usually likes running, and on weekends he likes to play tennis. What about you?

A: I don't like sports. I like singing, listening to music, and dancing.

(2) Teacher-student Q&A to help students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce grammar 1 "ÿ" and grammar 2 "S + Time Word + ÿ + Place + V (O)" and the vocabulary in this section in turn. Special emphasis should be placed on the usage of "ÿ". Use questions to practice substitution, allowing students to confirm the grammatical structure and pay attention to pronunciation.

(4) Summarize and review the dialogue, grammatical structure and pronunciation with the students.

4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Does Jiawen like sports? (2) What sports does Jiawen usually like to do? (3) What does Jiawen's older brother usually like to do?

(4) What sports does Gloria like? (5) Do Jiawen and his brother like singing and dancing?

Machine Translated by Google

(6) What does Gloria usually do at home in the evenings? (7) What does Jiawen do in the evenings? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation:

(8) Do you like to exercise?

(9) What do you usually like to do? (10) What do you usually do on weekends? (11) What do you usually do at home in the evenings?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read the text aloud individually in turn, and correct their pronunciation.

6. Use the text content to have students practice narration, thus achieving the learning objectives of this lesson. In addition to dialogue, students can also develop monologue-style narration.

(1) Have students work in pairs to introduce Wang Jiawen, Wang Mingwen, and Gloria's vacation using the key sentences from this lesson. Leisure hobbies.

(2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or a PowerPoint presentation, and asks students to say the following:

a. Wang Jiawen likes sports; he usually enjoys running. b. Wang Mingwen usually enjoys running and likes to play tennis on weekends. c. Wang Jiawen and Wang Mingwen also like singing, but neither of them likes dancing. d. Gloria doesn't like sports. She likes singing, listening to music, and dancing.

e. Gloria also enjoys watching television; she often watches television at home in the evenings.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

7. After the lesson is completed, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm the grammatical structure.

8. After completing the grammar exercises, you can focus on explaining the complex structures of several Chinese characters or those that students frequently misunderstand. The stroke order is displayed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Integrated Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition)

B: Yes, I like to go there at night. _____

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to talk about their leisure activities with others. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format, remind students of the sentences to be used, and review vocabulary related to leisure activities. b. Have students use the prescribed sentences to interview four classmates and record the results in Integrated Activity 3(1). sheet.

c. Have students use the information in Table (1) to complete sentence (2). d.

Have students take turns reporting the survey results, and complete sentence (3) based on the students' reports.

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading and Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the content learned in this lesson to understand Chinese calendars and speak about them fluently.

(2) Method: a. Explain the activity method and remind students of the sentences and vocabulary to be used. b.

Students complete the following sentences according to the calendar.

c. The teacher asks students to describe Gloria and Jiawen's daily activities.

d. Depending on the situation, two people can work together to fill in their daily activities using the blank calendar below, and then discuss their daily activities with a friend.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

I. Please read the dialogue first, and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

A: Mary, do you like sports?

B: I like sports, and I usually like to play tennis.

A: What does your brother usually like to do?

B: He usually likes to listen to music, and he likes to go to karaoke with his friends on weekends. Mingmei, what about you?

A: I don't like singing. I like listening to music and dancing.

B: My brother and I also like listening to music, but neither of us likes dancing.

A: I also like running. I often go running in the park at night.

B: I live in Taiwan and I like to watch TV at home in the evenings.

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. Mary's brother likes to listen to music and sing.

( )2. Mary and her brother don't like dancing. ( )3. Mingmei often watches TV at home in the evening.

( )4. Mary likes playing tennis and running.

Answer: OOXX

II. Please read the passage first, then answer the questions below.

1. What sports does Steve usually like to do?

2. What does Steve's brother dislike doing? 3. What do they usually do on weekend mornings? 4. What do they do on weekend afternoons?

Suggested answer:

1. He usually enjoys running and playing tennis. 2.

His younger brother doesn't like playing tennis. 3. They often go running in the park on weekend mornings. 4. They listen to music and watch TV at home on weekend afternoons.

VII. Phonetics Instruction/Phonics Review

1. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

Initials: zh, ch, sh, r; Finals: -ing, an, -iong

(1) When -ing is not preceded by an initial consonant, it is written as ying, such as yÿng (ÿ). (2) When

-iong is not preceded by an initial consonant, it is written as yong, such as yòng (ÿ). 2. Neutral tone

In spoken Chinese, besides the four tones, there is another lighter, shorter tone that is not marked with any tone mark and is called the "neutral tone". Examples include: gÿge (older brother), mèimei (younger sister), xièxie (thank you), shénme (what), and nín ne (you).

3. For sounds and rhymes not found in this lesson, you can find vocabulary exercises from other lessons. Try to avoid using sounds and rhymes that do not exist in Chinese. To practice the four tones of a certain syllable, syllables that do not exist in Chinese may appear. This book will mark them with ( ), such as (rÿ) and (xiÿng), to indicate that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese.

4. Use slides or flashcards to have students read sentences or words aloud and correct their pronunciation.

Cultural Unit (II)

How people greet each other

Do you find it strange that when you leave for work in the morning, your neighbors see you and ask, "Going to work?" or "Going out?" And when you run into a friend around 2 or 3 pm, they see you and ask, "Have you eaten?" These situations are obvious, so why do friends and neighbors still ask? These are common Chinese greetings. You might ask, when you were learning Chinese, your teacher taught you to say "ÿÿ!" on the first day, so why don't they say "ÿÿ!"? Because Chinese people use this "knowing the answer" approach to greet familiar family and friends.

When meeting someone, besides saying "Hello!", other common greetings include: "Have you eaten?", "Going to class?", "You're back!", etc. "Hello!" is typically used when you've just met someone, for the first time, or in more formal settings. With this greeting, you don't need a detailed response; a simple "Yes!" or "That's right!" will suffice. If a Chinese person speaks to you like this, don't be surprised; they're simply greeting you and showing concern.

Lesson 7

May I ask who you are?

I. Learning Objectives

Topic: Telephone Etiquette

After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Answer a formal telephone call. 2. State your identity and the purpose of your call. 3. Ask for someone's phone number. 4. Leave a caller ID message.

II . Teaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity

Method: Provide a scenario with pictures, ask students for their phone/mobile phone numbers. You can say it once in their native language first, and then let students become familiar with the way Chinese numbers are said.

2. Sentences used: What is your phone number (mobile phone number)? / My phone number (mobile phone number) is... _____

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. "ÿÿ"

(nÿi wèi) is a contraction of "ÿÿÿ" (nÿ yÿ wèi). When "ÿ" (nÿ) and "ÿ" (yÿ) are adjacent, the contraction is (nÿi). In spoken language, "ÿÿ" can be pronounced as either (nÿi wèi) or (nÿ wèi). Furthermore, "ÿ" has high collocation with other words, so the new words in this lesson are listed separately as two words: "ÿ" and "ÿ". 2. "ÿ" (wéi) is only pronounced (wéi) in telephone use. When used to summon or attract someone's attention, it is pronounced (wèi). 3. "ÿÿ" (yÿhòu) is listed as a noun in this lesson. It functions as a time word and can also be used as a conjunction, connecting two clauses to indicate...

Two events that occurred one after the other.

Machine Translated by Google

4. "Thank you" is a verb in this lesson. It can be followed by a noun, such as "Thank you," or "Thank you, brother." It can also be used alone without a noun, simply saying "Thank you." 5. "Okay" is used when someone makes a request, gives a command, or assigns a task, indicating understanding.

6. In this lesson, "trouble" is a polite way of asking for help and is listed as a verb (V). For example: Could you please ask her to call me when she gets back? This lesson only teaches the verb usage and does not extend the usage of the adjective (Vs). For example: This matter is troublesome.

7. The Chinese word "ÿ" has many meanings. In this lesson, it means to send, for example, to make a phone call. In Lesson 6, "Playing Tennis," "ÿ" means to play. Teachers do not need to specifically explain the meaning of "ÿ," but should strengthen exercises in word collocation.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, rather than teaching solely outside the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps. This lesson contains many telephone phrases, such as: "who," "hello," "excuse me," "mobile phone," "number," "what number," "thank you," "goodbye," etc. It is recommended to introduce these phrases in context to make a lasting impression and enhance memory.

III. Grammar Teaching 1.

Numbers

(1) Usage of “ÿ” and “ÿ”

When "2" is used as a number and is not followed by a quantifier, it is read as "two". For example:

One, two, three, four, five

(2) When "2" is followed by a measure word to indicate quantity, it should be read as "ÿ" (liÿng). For example:

Two + classifier + noun

Two younger sisters

Two students

(3) "200" can be read as "two hundred" or "two hundred".

2. S + give (preposition) + person + make a phone call

(1) "ÿ" is a preposition. It is generally followed by a noun or pronoun, functioning as a prepositional phrase, and is placed before the verb. For example:

S + give + N / Pron + make a phone call Gloria called Mingwen.

Who did Lin Meimei call? Lin

Meimei called her parents.

Machine Translated by Google

(2) In certain sentences with specific verbs, a prepositional phrase can be placed after the verb and have the same meaning.

For example:

I called him.

I called him.

3. From now on

"Afterwards" connects two events that occur sequentially. "Afterwards" follows the end of the first sentence (after the first event), and is immediately followed by the second event. For example:

event 1 + later + event 2

After listening to music, Ms. Li often goes for a run.

After a nice jog, I enjoy listening to music.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. Is Ms. Lin here?

2. May I ask who you are?

3. When will Ms. Lin be back? 4. What is your mobile phone number?

5. Could you please ask her to call me when she gets back?

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from the perspectives of Miss Li and Gloria, reads aloud key sentences from the text (with accompanying pictures), allowing students to...

Focus on the key sentences in this lesson. For example:

(1) Ms. Li

"Hello, Tai Yi Bank! / Ms. Lin is not in the office right now. / May I ask who this is? / You..."

What's your phone number?

(2) Gloria "I am

Gloria from Nortel. / Hello! Is Ms. Lin Meimei here? / When will Ms. Lin be back? / Please ask her to call me when she is back." 2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to help understand the text. 3. Introduce grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts according to the text and teach them in sequence. First, let the students understand the meaning of the sentences and be able to roughly remember the pronunciation, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. The suggested process is as follows: (1) Introduce the dialogue in context.

A: Hello, this is Tai-Yi Bank!

Machine Translated by Google

B: Hello! Is Ms. Lin Meimei there?

A: Ms. Lin is not in the office right now. May I ask who you are?

B: This is Gloria from Nortel Networks. When will Ms. Lin be back?

A: Gloria, Miss Lin will be back this afternoon.

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize their meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce the sentence patterns "S + in + place + ?", "S + (not) in + place", "S + when + ?", and "S + time + ? ?", which are key sentences used in telephone responses. Use pictures or PPTs to practice substitution through questions, helping students confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation.

(4) Summarize and review the dialogue, grammar structure, and pronunciation with the students. (5) Introduce other dialogues, grammar, vocabulary, etc. in sequence. 4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Where does Lin Meimei work?

(2) Who called Lin Meimei?

(3) Where does Gloria work?

(4) Is Ms. Lin in her office? (5) When will Ms. Lin be back?

(6) What does Gloria want Miss Li to do?

(7) What is Gloria's mobile phone number?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it individually in turns, correcting their pronunciation. 6. After completing the text lesson, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm grammatical structures. 7. Using the content provided in the text, have students practice narration to achieve the learning objectives of this lesson.

In addition to dialogue, students can also develop monologue-style expressions.

(1) Have students work in pairs to recount the conversation between Ms. Li and Gloria, using key sentences from this lesson. (2) The teacher provides necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or a PowerPoint presentation, and students recite the following:

a. Gloria from Nortel called Lin Meimei from Tai-Yi Bank.

b. Lin Meimei is not in the office right now; she will be back this afternoon.

c. Gloria, could you please ask Ms. Li to have Lin Meimei call her when she returns? d. Gloria's mobile phone number is (517) 360 4259.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

8. After completing the grammar exercises, you can focus on explaining the complex structures of several Chinese characters or those that students frequently misunderstand. The stroke order is displayed.

9. Depending on the students' level and the number of class hours, teachers may have students participate in role-playing activities involving answering telephone calls.

Machine Translated by Google

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Integrated Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to read sentences in the dialogue and pronounce them correctly without the assistance of phonetic symbols and pinyin.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Integrated Activity Two (Fill in the blanks, writing)

(1) Objective: Students can memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after reciting them, understand the content of the dialogue, and write out the missing parts using Chinese characters or pinyin.

(2) Method: a.

Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Writing Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level. d.

Supplementary activities can be arranged if time permits. Supplementary activities can be arranged for students who learn quickly and at a high level.

Replace the original activity. The process is the same as above.

Supplementary activity (allow students to add or remove sentences according to their own situation)

A: Hello! _____

B: Hello! Are you there?_____

A: I'm not here right now. May I ask who you are?_____ _____

B: Yes, that's me. When will you be back?_____

A: (Name) (Time) will be back. _____

B: Please give this to me when you come back._____

A: May I ask who you are? _____

B: Mine is._____ _____

A: Okay.

B: You!_____

A: Goodbye.__

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to fluently use the sentences learned in this lesson to ask for someone's phone number. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind students of the sentences and vocabulary to be used. b. Have students use the prescribed sentences to interview three classmates and record the results in Integrated Activity 3(1). sheet.

c. The teacher asks students to report the results of their interviews by asking them questions.

d. The teacher randomly selects students and asks them to present the relevant dialogue.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Integrated Activity Four (Role-playing)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the content learned in this lesson fluently and supplement it with two additional telephone scenarios so that students can answer telephone calls in Chinese.

(2) Method:

a. The teacher first explains the telephone response phrases in the picture that are different from those in the text, such as: when the person answering the phone is himself, he will say "This is me."; if someone else answers the phone, he will respond with "He is here, please wait a moment."

b. Explain the activity format and remind participants of the sentences and vocabulary to be used.

c. Students complete the dialogue exercises using the three scenarios provided in Activity 4. d. Students present their dialogues to the class in groups.

5. Integrated Activity Five (Reading)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use what they have learned to understand important information on a business card. (2) Method:

a. First, prompt students with the information they are looking for, such as name, workplace, and phone number. b. Have students discuss in groups and write down the Chinese characters for the phone number. c. Ask students relevant questions. d. Call on students to come to the front and write down the Chinese characters for the phone number.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

I. Please read the dialogue first, and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

A: Hello, Wenlin Computer Company!

B: Hello! Is this Steve Lee?

A: Steve Lee is not in the office right now. May I ask who you are?

B: This is Chen Wenmei from Tai Yi Bank. When will Steve Lee be back?

A: Ms. Chen, Steve Lee will be back this afternoon.

B: Could you please ask him to call me when he gets back?

A: May I ask what your phone number is?

B: My company's phone number is (652) 9182736.

A: Okay, Ms. Chen.

B: Thank you!

A: You're welcome, goodbye.

Machine Translated by Google

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. Chen Wenmei called Steve.

( )2. Steve works at a bank in Taiwan.

( ) 3. Steve is not in the office now.

( )4. Chen Wenmei's mobile phone number is (652) 9182736.

Answer: OXOX

II. Please read the passage first, then answer the questions below.

> Li Xiaowen from Guoying Company called Zhang Tianming from Taiyi Bank, but Zhang Tianming was not in the office at the moment; he would be back in the afternoon. Li Xiaowen asked Ms. Wang from Taiyi Bank to ask Zhang Tianming to call her when he returned. Li Xiaowen's mobile phone number is (835) 7291468.

Answer the following questions:

1. Who did Li Xiaowen call?

2. Where does Zhang Tianming work?

3. When will Zhang Tianming return? 4.

What does Li Xiaowen need Miss Wang for? 5.

What is Li Xiaowen's mobile phone number?

answer:

1. Li Xiaowen called Zhang Tianming.

2. Zhang Tianming works at a bank in Taiwan.

3. Zhang Tianming returned in the afternoon.

4. Please ask Zhang Tianming to call her after he returns.

5. Li Xiaowen's mobile phone number is (835) 7291468.

VII. Phonetics Instruction/Phonics Review

1. This lesson introduces pinyin. Finals: -ie, er, -ian, -iang, -un (uen), -uang

(1) -ie is written as ye when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: yÿ (ÿ).

(2) -ian is written as yan when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: yán (ÿ).

(3) -iang is written as yang when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: yán

(ÿ). (4) -un (-uen) is written as wen when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: wén (ÿ). (5) -uang is written as wang when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: wáng (ÿ).

Machine Translated by Google

2. In this lesson, to practice the four tones of a certain syllable, syllables that do not exist in Chinese may appear. This book will mark them with ( ), such as (jiáng) and (kún), indicating that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese. However, when teachers conduct exercises, they can find vocabulary from other lessons to practice with, and try not to use phonological combinations that do not exist in Chinese for exercises.

3. Use slides or flashcards to have students read sentences or words aloud, and correct their pronunciation.

Lesson 8

Happy birthday to you!

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Birthdays and Dates After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Identify dates. 2. State your birthday and age. 3. Express your needs.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: Introduce the way dates are said using a calendar, and use questions to familiarize students with the Chinese date system.

statement.

2. Sentences to use: What is today's date? / What is today's month/day? Prioritize familiarity with dates like "Month/Day" and "Day/Day".

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. Add blessings after "ÿÿ" (zhù nÿ), such as: "ÿÿÿÿÿÿ!" (Zhù nÿ shÿng rìkuài lè!) and "ÿÿÿÿÿÿ!" (Zhù nÿ xÿnnián kuài lè!) 2. "ÿ" (lè) is a polyphonic character (a character with multiple pronunciations). Remind students to pay attention to the "ÿ" in "ÿÿ" (kuàilè, happiness) and "ÿÿ" (yÿnyuè, music).

The characters are pronounced differently.

3. "Eldest brother (eldest sister)" refers to the eldest brother (sister) in the family, with the order decreasing according to age: "second brother" and "eldest sister".

"Brother (or Second Sister)" or "Third Brother (or Third Sister)".

4. The word "please" has several meanings. In this lesson, "you invite me to a big meal" means we are going to have a big meal, and you pay for it. In Lesson 7,

"please call me when she comes back" uses "please" as a polite way of asking someone to do something.

Machine Translated by Google

5. The particle "ÿ" (òu) is used in Chinese language textbooks to express a response to someone else's words. Common usages include: "ÿ! I remember now," and "ÿ! I almost forgot." The Chinese dictionary lists the pronunciation of "ÿ." (yÿ), which has a different pronunciation and meaning from the one in this lesson.

6. When students say "I am X years old", they may confuse it with "year". Teachers should use the sentence "I (dad, sister) am X years old this year" to practice this word.

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, rather than teaching in isolation from the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify their pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. Date

Month, Day

Placing the month, day, or month after the number expresses the date. For example: January 10th/day, February 9th/day, August 17th/day, November 20th/day. "Day" is used in everyday spoken language, while "day" is used in written language.

2. What is the date? / How old are you?

(1) To ask for the date, place the "day" before the "month" and "number". For example:

Mr. Li: What is today's date?

Ms. Zhang: Today is March 5th.

(2) Asking about age: When asking someone's age, you put "how many" before "years old." In general spoken language, you can omit "is" when stating someone's age. Also, if someone is over ten years old, "years old" can be omitted. For example:

Pingping: Jiawen, how old are you?

Jiawen: I'm seventeen. How about you?

Pingping: I'm fifteen.

3. Additional questions: Is it good? / Is it okay?

Adding "Is it okay?" or "Is it alright?" to the end of a complete declarative sentence forms a question, used to express a suggestion, request for permission, or confirmation. "Is it okay?" and "Is it alright?" are mostly used to express suggestions. "...Is it alright?" and "Is it possible?" are mostly used to request permission. For example:

Machine Translated by Google

I want to go to Disneyland, is that okay?

Please give me a birthday present, okay?

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. What is tomorrow's date?
2. Tomorrow is August 11th.
3. Tomorrow is my seventeenth birthday.
4. May I have a pair of sneakers?
5. How about you treat me to a fancy meal?

Recommended process

1. From the perspective of Wang Mingwen and Wang Jiawen, the teacher (with pictures) states Jiawen's birthday and what birthday he would like.

Gifts and Wang Mingwen's birthday wishes, etc., allow students to encounter key sentences from this lesson. For example:

(1) Mingwen:

"Jiawen, tomorrow is your birthday, happy birthday! / What do you want for your birthday?" (2) Jiawen: "Tomorrow is August 11th. / Tomorrow is my seventeenth birthday. / I want a pair of sneakers, can..."

"Will you treat me to a big meal?" / "Will you?" 2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to help with comprehension. 3. Introduce grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts according to grammar, and teach them sequentially. First, let the students understand the meaning of the sentences, and then...

First, memorize the general pronunciation, then reinforce specific grammatical structures and vocabulary. The suggested process is as follows:

(1) Pair the dialogue with the context.

A: Brother, what's tomorrow's date?

B: Tomorrow is August 11th. Oh! Tomorrow is your birthday.

A: Yes! Tomorrow is my seventeenth birthday.

B: Jiawen, happy birthday! What kind of birthday present do you want?

A: I'd like a pair of sneakers, is that okay?

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce the expressions for "date" in grammar 1, "month and day/age" in grammar 2, and sentences for congratulating someone on their birthday. Use pictures or PPTs and ask questions to practice substitution, helping students confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation. (4) Summarize and review the dialogues, grammatical structures, and pronunciation with the students. (5) Introduce other dialogues, grammar, and vocabulary from the text in sequence.

Machine Translated by Google

4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) What is tomorrow's date? (2) Whose birthday is tomorrow?

(3) How old is Jiawen this year?

(4) What birthday present does Jiawen want? (5)

What birthday present does Jiawen's older brother give him? (6) When will they go to buy sneakers? (7) What will they do after buying sneakers? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation:

(8) What is your birthday?

(9) How old are you this year?

(10) What do you want for your birthday? (11)

When do you want to have a big meal?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read the text aloud individually in turn, and correct their pronunciation.

6. Using the content provided in the text, have students complete narrative exercises based on what they have learned, in order to achieve the learning objectives of this lesson.

In addition to dialogue, life can also develop a monologue-style narrative.

(1) Have students work in pairs to work together to say Wang Jiawen's birthday and what Wang Mingwen gave Jiawen, using the key sentences from this lesson.

Birthday gift.

(2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or PPT, and asks the students to say the following: a.

Tomorrow is August 11th, (tomorrow) is Jiawen's seventeenth birthday.

b. Mingwen wishes Jiawen a happy birthday.

c. Mingwen gives Jiawen a birthday present.

d. Jiawen wants a pair of sneakers.

e. They went to buy sneakers tonight, and Mingwen also treated Jiawen to a big meal.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.) 7. After the text is taught, guide the students to complete the grammar exercises to confirm the grammatical structure. 8. After completing the grammar exercises, focus on a few Chinese characters with complex structures or those that students easily misunderstand, and then have a discussion on their meaning.

The stroke order is displayed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Integrated Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin.

Pronunciation is correct.

Machine Translated by Google

(2) Method: a.

Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Integrated Activity Two (Fill in the blanks, writing)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after recitation, understand the content of the dialogue, and use Chinese characters or spelling.

Write out the missing parts using phonetic transcription.

(2) Method: a.

Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Write Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level.

d. Supplementary activities can be arranged if time permits. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so supplementary activities are appropriate.

Replace the original activity. The process is the same as above.

Supplementary activity (allow students to add or remove sentences according to their own situation)

A: What day is tomorrow? _____ _____

B: It's the month. Oh! Tomorrow is yours. _____

A: Yes! Tomorrow is my birthday.

B: Well, I wish you... What? _____ _____ _____

A: Do I want one? _____ _____

B: Okay, let's go buy it. Is there anything else you need?

A: Shall we go together? _____

B: Okay, no. _____

A: Thank you. _____

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to ask others about their birthdays, ages, and what they want.

Gift.

(2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and provide prompts for the sentences to be used, starting by asking students questions to practice. The teacher may supplement with vocabulary related to birthday gifts as needed.

b. Students first write down their information in the table.

c. Have students use the given sentences to interview three classmates and record the results in the table of Integrated Activity 3.

d. Have students take turns reporting the results of their interviews. e. The teacher randomly selects students to display relevant dialogues.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully apply the content learned in this lesson and understand the content of the flashcards. (2) Method:

a. First, have the students read the text on the cards.

b. The teacher asks questions, prompting students to recall the information on the cards.

c. Students can guess the meaning of "Mommy" on the cards based on their prior knowledge of the word "Mom".

5. Integrated Activity Five (Writing Cards)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully apply what they have learned in this lesson to write birthday cards to their parents or friends in Chinese.

(2) Method:

a. The teacher randomly calls on students to say the information that should be included on the card, such as: the recipient, the blessing.

a. Include auspicious words, dates, etc. b. Provide students with the necessary vocabulary. c. Instruct students to complete this card at home, either in their textbooks or using other media such as paper.

Multimedia, etc.

d. After students complete the work, they can present their finished products to the whole class or read the content aloud.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

I. Please read the dialogue first, and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

A: Sister, what's tomorrow's date?

B: Tomorrow is April 1st. Oh! Tomorrow is your birthday.

A: Yes! Tomorrow is my eighteenth birthday.

B: Wenmei, happy birthday! What kind of birthday present would you like?

A: May I have a computer?

B: Okay, we'll go buy it tomorrow night. Is there anything else you need?

A: How about you treat me to a fancy meal?

B: Okay, no problem.

A: So when are we going to have a big meal?

B: After we buy the computer, we'll go out for a big meal.

A: Thank you, sister.

Machine Translated by Google

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. Tomorrow is Wenmei's eighteenth birthday.

( )2. Wenmei's older sister gave her a pair of sneakers. ( )3.

Wenmei wants to treat her older sister to a big meal.

Answer: OXXO

II. Please read the passage first, then answer the questions below.

Mary is Steve's sister. Tomorrow, May 17th, is Mary's 22nd birthday. Mary loves running and wants a pair of running shoes. Steve and Mary will go buy the shoes tomorrow night, and afterwards, Steve will treat Mary to a big meal.

1. What is tomorrow's date?
2. How old is Mary tomorrow?
3. What does Mary want for her birthday?
4. What will they do after buying sneakers tomorrow?

answer:

1. Tomorrow is May 17th.
2. Tomorrow is Mary's 22nd birthday.
3. Mary wants a pair of sneakers.
4. Steve invited Mary to a fancy dinner.

VII. Phonetics Instruction/Phonics Review

1. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

Finals: -ia, -uan, -üan (1) -ia is written as ya when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: yá (tooth). (2) -uan is written as wan when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: wÿn (evening). (3) -üan can only be combined with j, q, x, and is written as -uan. For example: xuÿn (select), quÿn (dog), juÿn (roll). (4) -üan is written as yuan when there is no initial consonant before it. For example: yuán (member).

2. In this lesson, to practice the four tones of a certain syllable, syllables that do not exist in Chinese may appear. This book will mark them with ( ), such as (zhuán), indicating that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese. However, when teachers conduct exercises, they can find vocabulary from other lessons to practice with, and try not to use phonological combinations that do not exist in Chinese for practice.

3. It can be used with slides or flashcards to allow students to read sentences or words aloud and to correct their pronunciation.

Lesson 9

Are you free on Friday?

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Social Invitations

After completing this lesson, you will be able to use Chinese to: 1. Invite friends out for a meal. 2. Know and state the date and time. 3. Accept or decline an invitation depending on the situation. 4. Confirm details such as the date, time, and location of an invitation.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: Introduce the concept of days of the week to students using a calendar, and use questions to familiarize students with the Chinese days of the week. statement.

2. Sentence used: What day of the week is today (tomorrow/month)?

Today (tomorrow/month) is the day of the week.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. "ÿÿ"

(xÿngqÿ) can also be said as "ÿÿ" (lÿlÿ), with the same usage, such as "ÿÿ" (zhÿuzhÿu) can also be said as "ÿÿÿ" (zhÿuzhÿu yÿ). 2. "ÿ" (yào) is an auxiliary verb expressing personal intention or plan, used in the same way as "ÿ" (xiÿng). It is followed by a verb to express the desire to do something, such as "ÿÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ" (wÿmeng qù mÿidÿ tÿcÿngchÿ fànchÿ). For negative usage, add "ÿ" (bù) before "ÿ". The difference between "ÿ" and "ÿ": "ÿ" (xiÿng) refers to something that is just an idea, still being planned, and may not necessarily happen. "ÿ" (yào) refers to something that has been decided, and has a high probability of happening.

Machine Translated by Google

3. "ÿ" and "ÿÿ" are used in responses, meaning "yes" or "no". They can be used alone or after a phrase or sentence, such as "How about Friday?" in which case the answer is "no" or "Friday is not possible".

4. "ÿ" is a determiner used to refer to things that are far from the speaker. "ÿÿ" (nèi jiÿ) is "ÿ". A combination of the sounds of "a family" (nà yÿ jiÿ).

5. "ÿ" is an adverb, followed by a stative verb (Vs), indicating that something surpasses others in the same category, such as: "ÿ". The beef noodles at this restaurant are the best.

6. "How about" is used to inquire about a situation or opinion, such as: "A: How about Friday? B: Friday is not a good day." "A: How about the delicious restaurant? B: That restaurant has the best beef noodles." 7. The phrase "That's great!" is used in response to someone else's comment to express joy or surprise. The teacher provides scenarios during teaching. It teaches students when to use it correctly. It does not explain the "word structure" or the character "ÿ".

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, rather than teaching in isolation from the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify their pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps.

III. Grammar Teaching 1.

Weekdays + Numbers

(1) "What day of the week?" is a sentence asking which day of the week it is. When answering, just replace "what day" with the correct number. In Chinese, "Sunday" can also be said as "Sunday", but "Sunday" is more commonly used in spoken language.

(2) “ÿÿ” and “ÿÿ” have the same meaning and usage. In written language, “ÿ” can also be used to replace “ÿÿ” or “ÿÿ”, such as “ÿ” for “ÿÿ”, and so on. However, “ÿÿ” cannot be said as “ÿÿ”.

2. Word order of dates

In Chinese, the word order for "ÿ" (period/phase) is from the largest unit to the smallest unit, such as:

Saturday evening, September 18, 2021

Tuesday morning, March 25th this year

(3)

"2:10" and "4:20". If the score exceeds 10, the score is...

It can be omitted, such as "4:20" or "5:30".

(4) Half a minute can be said as "half", such as "one half" (one point thirty) and "two half" (two points thirty).

4. with

"With + someone" placed before the main verb indicates doing something with someone, and is often used with "together". For example:

With + Someone + Together + V (O) I had dinner with my parents on the weekend.

I often exercise with my younger brother.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. Would you like to come with us? 2.

Saturday is not possible, how about Friday?

3. We'll meet at the restaurant at 6:30 p.m. on Friday.

4. That restaurant has the best beef noodles.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, from the perspective of Wang Mingwen and Gloria (with accompanying pictures), reads some sentences from the text. For example:

"We're going to a delicious restaurant for dinner on Saturday night, do you want to come with us?", "Saturday is not possible, how about Friday?", "We'll meet at the restaurant at 6:30 pm on Friday night.", "That restaurant has the best beef noodles," etc., allowing students to encounter key sentences from the lesson. 2. The teacher leads the class in reading the text aloud, and the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to aid comprehension. 3. Grammar introduction:

Divide the dialogue into several parts according to grammar and teach them sequentially. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences...

Memorize the pronunciation roughly, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. The suggested process is as follows: (1) Enter the dialogue in context.

A: Glora, long time no see.

Machine Translated by Google

B: Hello, Mingwen. This is my colleague, Lisa.

A: Lisa, it's nice to meet you.

C: It's nice to meet you too.

B: Mingwen, we're going to a delicious restaurant for dinner on Saturday night. Do you want to come with us?

A: Saturday won't work, how about Friday?

B: Friday is fine too.

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce grammar 1, the expression for "week," grammar 2, the word order of dates, the usage of "okay/not okay," and "how to." Use pictures or PPT to ask questions and practice substitution, helping students confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation.

(4) Summarize and review the dialogue, grammar structure and pronunciation with the students. (5) Then introduce other dialogues, grammar, vocabulary and other content in turn.

4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) Who is Lisa?

(2) What are Gloria and Lisa going to do on Saturday? (3) Should Mingwen go with them? (4) What day of the week is Mingwen free?

(5) Do Gloria and Lisa have time on Fridays?

(6) What time does class end on Friday? (7) When do they meet at the restaurant? (8) What's the best dish at that restaurant? You can also ask:

(9) Who do you usually eat with? (10) Do you often eat with your friends on weekends? (11) Which restaurant do you like to eat at with your friends?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it individually in turns, and correct their pronunciation.

6. Using the content provided in the text, have students complete narrative exercises to achieve the learning objectives of this lesson.

In addition to dialogue, life can also develop a monologue-style narrative.

(1) Have students work in pairs to describe Wang Mingwen, Gloria, and Lisa's plan using key sentences from this lesson. (2) The teacher provides the necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or a PowerPoint presentation, and students say the following:

a. Lisa is Gloria's colleague.

b. On Saturday night, Gloria and Lisa are going to a delicious restaurant for dinner.

c. Mingwen also wanted to go with them, but he couldn't on Saturday.

d. Mingwen is available on Friday, Gloria and Lisa are also welcome.

Machine Translated by Google

e. Classes end at 5 PM on Friday.

f. They met at the restaurant at 6:30 p.m. on Friday.

g. That restaurant has the best beef noodles.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

7. After the lesson is completed, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm the grammatical structure.

8. After completing the grammar exercises, you can focus on explaining the complex structures of several Chinese characters or those that students frequently misunderstand.

The stroke order is displayed.

V. Comprehensive Activities 1.

Comprehensive Activity One (Reading Aloud and Recognition) (1) Objective: Students can recognize and pronounce sentences in the dialogue correctly without the assistance of phonetic symbols and pinyin. (2)

Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Integrated Activity Two (Fill in the blanks, writing)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after recitation, understand the content of the dialogue, and use Chinese characters or spelling.

Write out the missing parts. (2)

Method: a.

Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Write Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level.

d. Supplementary activities can be arranged if time permits. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so supplementary activities are appropriate.

Replace the original activity. The process is the same as above.

Supplementary activity (allow students to add or remove sentences according to their own situation)

A: Long time no see.

B: Hello. This is me. _____ _____

A: It's nice to meet you.

C: It's nice to meet you too.

B: We're going. Do you want to come with us? _____ _____

A: No, what should I do? _____

B: That works too. Do you have time? _____

C: No problem.

B: Great! Are you done with class? _____

Machine Translated by Google

A: I'm done with get out of class.

B: We'll meet again, okay?

A: Great! That's the best. See you there.

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to invite friends to do leisure activities together. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity, prompting students to use appropriate sentences. Begin by asking questions to help them review expressions for leisure activities (running, listening to music, playing tennis, watching TV, etc.). The teacher may supplement relevant vocabulary as needed.

b. Have students speak using the two scenarios provided in the textbook.

c. The teacher randomly selects students to demonstrate relevant dialogues.

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully apply the content learned in this lesson to understand and describe the contents of a calendar. (2) Method:

a. Use pictures to help students understand the supplementary vocabulary for Activity Four. b. Have students read the contents of the calendar first. c. The teacher asks questions, calling on students to answer the questions from Activity Four. d. The teacher calls on students to come to the front and have them write the answers to the questions on the blackboard.

5. Integrated Activity Five (Reading)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the content learned in this lesson to understand the activity poster.

(2) Method:

a. The teacher prompts the students to first read the information on the poster. b. The teacher calls on students to answer the questions in Activity Five.

c. The teacher calls on a student to come to the front of the class and asks the student to write the answer to the question on the blackboard.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Machine Translated by Google

I. Please read the dialogue first, and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

A: Steve, long time no see.

B: Hello. Wenmei, this is my colleague Mark.

A: Mark, it's nice to meet you.

B: Wenmei, we're going to a delicious restaurant for dinner on Friday night. Do you want to come with us?

A: Friday won't work, how about Saturday?

B: Saturday is fine too. Mark, are you free on Saturday?

C: No problem.

B: That's great! Wenmei, what time are you free?

A: I have time after 5:30.

B: How about we meet at the restaurant at 6 p.m. on Saturday?

A: Great! That restaurant has the best beef noodles. See you on Saturday.

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. Wenmei is Mark's colleague.

( )2. Steve wants to invite Mark to a delicious restaurant.

( ) 3. Steve, Mark and Wenmei went out to eat together on Saturday.

( ) 4. Steve, Mark and Wenmei meet at the restaurant at 5:30 pm on Saturday.

Answer: XXOX

II. Please read the short passage first (or listen to the teacher read it aloud), and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

Zhang Ming is Jane's friend, Mary is Jane's colleague, and Zhang Ming also knows Mary.

Jane and Mary are going to a delicious restaurant for dinner on Friday, and Zhang Ming wants to go with them, but he doesn't have time on Friday. Zhang Ming is free on Saturday, and Jane and Mary are also free. They meet at the restaurant at 6 pm on Saturday.

( ) 1. Zhang Ming is Mary's colleague.

( )2. Jane and Mary are going to a delicious restaurant for dinner on Friday.

( ) 3. Zhang Ming has time on Friday.

( )4. Jane, Mary and Zhang Ming met at a restaurant on Saturday night.

Answer: XOXO

VII. Phonetics Teaching/Phonetic Review: This review is based on students' prior knowledge of Pinyin and aims to reinforce the pronunciation and rules of Pinyin. All symbols will be introduced in lessons one through nine of this book.

1. This lesson introduces Pinyin.

   Finals: -uai, -ui (uei), -üe, -en, -in Note 1: -uai is written as wai when there is no preceding consonant. For example: wài (foreign language learner's mother tongue). Note 2: -ui is written as wei when there is no preceding consonant. For example: wéi (ÿ). Note 3: -üe is written as -ue when the preceding consonant is j, q, or x. For example: xué (ÿ), quÿ (ÿ), jué (ÿ). Note 4: -üe is written as yue when there is no preceding consonant. For example: yuè (ÿ). Note 5: -in is written as yin when there is no preceding consonant. For example: yín (ÿ).

2. In this lesson, to practice the four tones of a certain syllable, syllables that do not exist in Chinese may appear. This book will mark them with ( ), such as: (kuái), (huÿi), (huÿi), (wái), (duí), (duÿ), (guí), (yué), (yuÿ), indicating that this pronunciation does not exist in Chinese. However, when teachers conduct exercises, they can find vocabulary from other lessons to practice with, and try not to use phonological combinations that do not exist in Chinese for exercises.

3. It can be used with slides or flashcards to allow students to read sentences or words aloud and to correct their pronunciation.

If the stroke order is incorrect, the teacher can demonstrate the correct stroke order in class.

(2) Structure: Write the Chinese characters for parts A and B on the blackboard (or slides), and have the students discuss and find the characters together. This activity can be added depending on the students' level and time. The teacher should explain less during the process and let the students discuss and find the answer visually as much as possible.

Lesson 10

Is it difficult to learn Chinese?

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Learning

After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Share your own language learning experience. 2. Discuss someone's learning progress. 3. Comment on someone's language ability. 4. Inquire about others' learning performance.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity

Method: Review previously learned vocabulary related to this lesson using pictures (e.g., speaking Chinese, writing characters, playing tennis, etc.). (Running, singing, etc.). The teacher gives examples and asks questions to familiarize students with the usage of "ÿ".

2. Sentence used: What do you know?

I won't. _____

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1.

"ÿÿ" (yÿ xià) is placed after a verb to indicate an action that is brief and easily accomplished. Note that when a verb includes an object, the structure is "V + ÿÿ + O", such as "ÿÿÿtenwang" (dÿ yÿ xiàn tánwÿ), not "ÿtenwang yÿ xiàn" (dÿ tánwÿ yÿ xiàn). (VO + a little bit).

2. "Have a cup of coffee" means "Let's drink a cup of coffee." When the numeral before the quantifier is "one," "one" can be omitted; other numerals cannot be omitted. In this lesson, "Let's go have a cup of coffee" means "Let's go have coffee."

3. The particle "ÿ" placed at the end of a sentence indicates a suggestion, such as: "Let's go get a cup of coffee!"

Machine Translated by Google

4. "Feel" expresses the speaker's opinion or view. Generally, when expressing a negative opinion, the negative word "not" is placed after "feel," such as in "I feel he can't speak Chinese." This is different from the usage of "I don't feel he can speak Chinese."

5. "ÿÿ" means very good. 6. "ÿ" has multiple meanings; this lesson only teaches one: "the ability acquired after learning." It cannot be used with "ÿ". The character "ÿ" in "ÿÿÿÿ" is confused.

7. The adverb "approximately" placed in "numeral + measure word + (noun)" indicates "about" or "approximately". 8. "A little bit" and "a little bit" are different; students often misuse them. Therefore, this lesson will repeatedly practice "a little bit" in phrase form. "A little + Vs (expensive, busy, tiring, many, few...)"

ÿ Teaching Methods:

For beginner-level vocabulary instruction, a top-down approach is recommended, using sentences as a foundation, rather than teaching in isolation from the text. Teaching should be contextualized, introducing the text and grammar while simultaneously helping students recognize new words, become familiar with their usage, and solidify their pronunciation. See the suggested teaching flow for the text for detailed steps.

III. Grammar Teaching 1.

Structural Auxiliary Word "ÿ"

In a sentence, the structural particle "ÿ" follows a verb, and after "ÿ" comes a complement that describes the state or degree of the action. This complement is usually composed of "adverb (Adv) + stative verb (Vs)".

S + V + O, V gets + (Adv) + Vs He speaks Chinese, and he speaks it very well.

She is learning Chinese and doing quite well. ÿ Common student mistake: The verb before "ÿ" does not include the object, such as: *He said his Chinese is very good.

2. A little

The adverb "ÿÿÿ" (yÿu yÿ diÿn) modifies a stative verb, indicating a low degree or a negative connotation, such as dissatisfaction or discontent. The "ÿ" (yÿ) can be omitted, and one can simply say "ÿÿ" (yÿu diÿn), as in:

A little bit + State Verb

Speaking Chinese is (a) a bit difficult.

My work is (a) a bit busy. ÿ Common student mistakes: (1) Omitting "ÿ" (yÿu), such as: *Speaking Chinese is a bit difficult. (2) Using it in a positive sense, such as: *The beef noodles at the delicious restaurant are a bit delicious.

3. Auxiliary verb "ÿ" (huì)

"ÿ" means the ability acquired through learning, such as "I can speak Chinese" or "I can write characters". When negating, it is the same as other auxiliary verbs, with "ÿ" added before the auxiliary verb "ÿ".

Machine Translated by Google

S + Meeting + V(O)

I can speak Chinese.

S + No + V(O)

I don't speak Chinese.

ÿ Common student errors: (1)

"ÿ" can only be used for abilities acquired through learning. The following sentences cannot use "ÿ", such as: *I

She can eat.

(2) Students may be influenced by their mother tongue and feel that the usage and restrictions of "ÿ" are the same as those of "can".

4. How much / how many

"ÿÿ" and "ÿ" are both interrogative words for asking about quantity or number. (1)

"ÿÿ" can be used to ask about any quantity or number, and no measure word is needed after "ÿÿ".

like:

S + V + how much + (Measure Word) + N ?

Q: How many students are there in that school?

A: That school has three hundred students.

Q: How many words can you write?

A: About a hundred words.

(2) "ÿ" is generally used when the estimated quantity is less than ten, and a measure word must be added after it.

S + V + several + Measure Word + N ?

Q: How many children do you have?

A: I have three children.

Q: How many younger brothers does Mingwen have?

A: He has two younger brothers.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

1. I think I've learned well.
2. I think speaking is not difficult, but writing is a little difficult.
3. I can write about thirty characters.
4. I often chat with Mingwen to practice my Chinese.

Machine Translated by Google

Recommended process

1. The teacher, speaking from Gloria's perspective, describes her own experience learning Chinese and quotes some sentences from the text. For example, "I think I'm doing quite well in learning Chinese. I find speaking Chinese not difficult, but writing is a little challenging. Now I can write about thirty characters, and I can also write my Chinese name. I often chat with Mingwen to practice my Chinese." This introduces students to key sentences from the lesson.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Picture cards can be prepared to aid comprehension.

3. Introduce grammar: Divide the dialogue into several parts based on grammar, and teach them sequentially. First, let students understand the meaning of the sentences, and then... Memorize the pronunciation roughly, and then strengthen individual grammatical structures and new words. The suggested process is as follows: (1) Enter the dialogue in context.

A: Gloria, take a break. Let's go get some coffee!

B: Okay, I'm very busy today, I need to take a break now.

A: How are you doing with your Chinese studies?

B: I think I've learned it quite well.

A: Is it difficult to learn Chinese?

B: Do you think speaking is difficult?

A: I think speaking is not difficult, but writing is a little difficult.

(2) Teacher-student Q&A helps students become familiar with sentences, memorize sentence meanings, and learn pronunciation. (3) Introduce the usage of "ÿ" (de) in grammar 1, "ÿÿÿ" (you yidian) in grammar 2, "V ÿÿ" (V yixia) and "ÿ" (ba) in turn, and how to judge language learning progress. Use pictures or PPT to conduct substitution exercises with questions to help students confirm grammatical structures and pay attention to pronunciation. (4) Summarize and review the dialogues, grammatical structures, and pronunciation with students. (5) Introduce other dialogues, grammar, vocabulary, etc. in turn.

4. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question:

(1) What are Lisa and Gloria going to do now?

(2) What is Gloria learning now? (3) How does she feel about her studies?

(4) Does Gloria find learning Chinese difficult? (5) How many characters can she write? (6) What else can she write? (7) Who does she usually practice speaking with? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (8) Are you busy today? Are you tired? (9) What are you learning now? (10) How do you feel about your learning?

Machine Translated by Google

(11) What do you find difficult about learning Chinese? What do you find easy?

(12) How many characters can you write?

(13) Can you write your own Chinese name? (11) Who do you usually practice speaking with?

5. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read the text aloud individually in turn, and correct their pronunciation.

6. Using the content provided in the text, have students complete narrative exercises based on what they have learned, in order to achieve the learning objectives of this lesson.

In addition to dialogue, life can also develop a monologue-style narrative.

(1) Have students work in pairs to describe Gloria's learning progress using key sentences from this lesson. (2) The teacher provides necessary vocabulary or phrases using flashcards or a PowerPoint presentation, and students recite the following:

a. Gloria is now learning Chinese.

b. She felt she had learned well.

c. She felt that speaking Chinese was not difficult, but writing was a little difficult.

d. She can write about thirty characters. e. She can also write her own Chinese name.

f. She often chats with Mingwen to practice her Chinese.

(The teacher may adjust the above content flexibly according to the students' level or situation.)

7. After the lesson is completed, guide students through the grammar exercises to confirm the grammatical structure.

8. After completing the grammar exercises, you can focus on explaining the complex structures of several Chinese characters or those that students frequently misunderstand.

The stroke order is displayed.

V. Integrated Activities 1. Integrated

(1) Objective: Students will be able to read and pronounce sentences in the dialogue correctly without the aid of phonetic symbols and pinyin. (2) Method: a. Have

3. Integrated Activity Three (Speaking)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences learned in this lesson fluently to ask what the other person can do and how well they can do it. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and provide the sentences to be used. Start by asking students questions to practice. The teacher may explain the supplementary vocabulary for Activity Three as needed. b. Have students use the given sentences to interview four classmates and record the results in the integrated Activity Three sheet.

c. Have students take turns reporting the results of the visit.

d. The teacher randomly selects students to demonstrate relevant dialogues.

4. Integrated Activity Four (Reading)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use their learning experience and knowledge of Chinese characters to determine the shape of Chinese characters. (2) Method: a. First, let students look at the four running script Chinese characters in Activity 4. b. The teacher will use PPT or pictures to display these four Chinese characters, and then display “ÿ” and “ÿ” (in regular script). c. Let students compare and find “ÿ” and “ÿ” among the four running script Chinese characters.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

I. Please read the dialogue first, and then judge whether the following sentences are correct.

A: Dave, take a break. Let's go get some coffee!

B: Okay, I'm very tired today, I need to rest for a bit.

A: How are you doing with your Chinese studies?

B: I think I've learned it quite well.

A: Do you think learning Chinese is difficult?

B: Writing is a little difficult, but speaking is not.

A: How many words can you write?

B: About fifty characters, and I can also write my Chinese name.

A: Who do you usually practice Chinese with?

B: I often chat with Xinmei to practice speaking.

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. Dave is very tired today.

( )2. Dave is going to eat with Jane now.

( ) 3. Jane thinks she is doing well in learning Chinese.

( ) 4. Dave finds it difficult to speak and write Chinese.

( )5. Dave often practices Chinese with Jane.

Answer: OXXXX

II. Please read the passage first, then answer the questions below.

It's Friday, and Dave isn't busy. He's going to have coffee with Xinmei this afternoon. They often have coffee together and speak Chinese. Xinmei thinks Dave is doing well in learning Chinese, and Dave also thinks he's doing very well. Dave can now write about fifty characters and even his own Chinese name.

question:

1. On which day of the week does Dave go for coffee with Kokomi?

2. What do Dave and Xinmei usually do together? 3.

What does Xinmei think of Dave's progress in learning Chinese?

4. What does Dave think?

5. How many words can Dave write now?

answer:

1. Dave went for coffee with Kokomi on Friday.

2. Dave often drinks coffee and practices Chinese with Kokomi.

3. Xinmei thinks Dave is learning Chinese quite well.

4. Dave also felt that he had learned very well.

5. Dave can now write fifty words.

VII. Phonetics Teaching / Phonetics Review: Tones of "ÿ" (yÿ) 1. When

"ÿ" (yÿ) is used in names, dates, or serial numbers, it retains its original first tone. It also retains its first tone when used as a marker. For example: Táiyÿ gÿngsÿ (ÿÿÿÿ), yÿyuè yÿhào (ÿÿÿÿ), dì yÿ kè (ÿÿÿ) 2. Tone Sandhi of "ÿ" (yÿ): When

"yÿ" is used for quantity or to form a word with other characters, its tone changes to that of "ÿ" (bù).

The tone sandhi rules are the same, and the tone changes with the following syllable.

(1) If the following syllable is a first, second, or third tone, the tone of "ÿ" is pronounced and marked as the fourth tone, for example: yìqiÿn (a thousand), yì máo (a single hair), yìqÿ (together). (2) If the following syllable is a fourth tone or a neutral tone, the tone of "ÿ" is pronounced and marked as the second tone, for example: yíge (one).

http://stroke-order.learningweb.moe.edu.tw/home.do (1) Stroke order: The new words in this lesson, such as "ÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ", are easy for students who are new to learning Chinese characters to make mistakes in stroke order. Teachers can demonstrate the stroke order in class.

(2) Structure: Write the following Chinese characters on the blackboard (or on a slide) and have the students discuss and find the characters together. This activity can be increased depending on the students' level and time. The teacher should explain less during the process and let the students discuss and find the answer visually as much as possible.

Cultural Unit (III)

Introduction to the Six Scripts of Chinese Characters

Gloria: What character did you write? Mingwen: It's the character for "moon," the "moon" of August.

Gloria: "Moon"? I can write "moon", but not this one!

Based on the principles of Chinese character formation and usage, Chinese characters are divided into six categories, generally known as the "Six Scripts" (ÿÿ). The Six Scripts are: Pictographs, indicative characters, associative compounds, phonetic compounds, derivative characters, and phonetic loan characters.

The "Six Scripts" were categorized into six types by Xu Shen of the Eastern Han Dynasty, based on the rules of their formation and usage, and he wrote the book "Shuowen Jiezi" (Explaining Simple and Complex Characters). In the preface to "Shuowen Jiezi," Xu Shen provided a simple explanation of the definition of each of the six scripts and gave two examples of each.

Machine Translated by Google

The Shuowen Jiezi (Explaining Characters and Analyzing Words) prefaces:

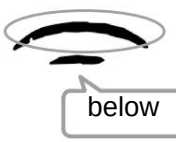

• Pictographs are depictions of objects, following their contours and curves; sun and moon are examples. • Indicative characters are those that are easily recognized and whose meaning is readily apparent; up and down are examples. • Associative compounds are those that combine meanings to convey a sense of purpose; martial and trust are examples. • Phonetic-semantic compounds are those whose names are derived from their meanings and whose characters complement each other; rivers and streams are examples. • Derivative characters are those that share the same radical and have similar meanings; examine and old are examples. • Borrowed characters are those that borrow from another character to represent a concept; order and chief are examples.

The Shuowen Jiezi (ÿÿÿÿ) contains more than 9,000 Chinese characters, among which phono-semantic characters are the most numerous.

1. Pictographs: These are characters created by depicting the shapes of real objects using simple lines. In other words, the outline of the thing to be represented is drawn as a pattern or abstract lines.

ÿ(rì)	sun	 ÿ ÿ ÿ Day
ÿ(yuè) moon		 ÿ ÿ ÿ Month
horse		 ÿ ÿ ÿ Horse

2. Ideographic characters: These are ancient methods of character creation that use symbolic symbols to represent meaning. When the character is not meant to express a physical entity but an abstract concept, pictographs cannot be used to create characters, and more abstract symbols must be used instead.

ÿ(shàng) above		 ÿ ÿ Up down (xià)	below	 ÿ ÿ Down

Machine Translated by Google

3. Ideographic characters: These are characters created by combining two or more simple characters according to principles of meaning to express a new meaning.

Character formation. Ideographic characters combine two or more individual characters to reveal the meaning of the object they refer to.

It thus became a compound ideograph.

Rest (xiÿ)	rest (a person is leaning on the tree, indicating “ ÿÿ resting ”)
Lin (lín)	grove (if there are two trees, there is a grove)

4. Phono-semantic characters: These are a method of character creation that uses a semantic component to represent meaning and a phonetic component to represent pronunciation to form a new character.

ÿ (mÿ) mother		 ÿ (nÿ) meaning, women ÿ	 sound, horse (mÿ)
ÿ(kÿo) to bake		 ÿ (huÿ) meaning, fire ÿ	 sound, ÿ (kÿo)

5. Characters with similar pronunciations and meanings (including those with the same radical) that can be mutually interpreted. These can be considered a type of writing system.

The derivative or borrowed form of a character has multiple meanings. Characters used for semantic extension must be in pairs or groups. For example, "ÿ" (kÿo) and "ÿ" (lÿo).

6. Borrowed Characters: Borrowing refers to the use of homophones to represent words in a language that have a sound but no written form. When a new thing appears...

After that, the word already existed in spoken language, but there was no written character to represent it, so it was necessary to borrow its name.

Using words with the same sound to represent something is called entrusting a matter. For example, "ÿ" (originally meaning the sole of a person's foot) is now used to mean "to stop".
