Editor’s Note

I. Teacher's Manual Usage Guidelines 1. The

textbook for Book 2 (this book) follows the editorial philosophy of Book 1, only with slightly increased text and sentence length. Vocabulary

There are 274 items, an increase of 51 from the first volume. There are 34 grammar rules.

2. The characters' names in Book 2 are presented in Chinese to familiarize students with Chinese names. Gloria is literally translated as Gao Liya. Although Gloria's surname is Lee in Book 1, her Chinese name is translated based solely on her English name. This is also one of the ways many teachers choose Chinese names for their students. Teachers can use Gao Liya to explain that her Chinese name is "surname Gao, given name Liya".

3. After completing Book 1, students' language proficiency will be approximately at the preparatory level of the TOCLF (Test of Spoken Chinese as a Foreign Language). Completing this book will likely elevate them to the entry level. Gate level.

II. Teacher's Manual Structure 1.

Learning Objectives: Each lesson has a theme, and after completing the lesson, students will be able to express content related to the theme in Chinese. 2. Teaching Focus and Activity Design.

(1) Warm-up activities: It is suggested that the teacher introduce the theme of this lesson in a warm-up way. (2)

Vocabulary teaching: a.

Explain the meaning and scope of use of words with multiple meanings in this lesson. For example, “ÿ”, “ÿ”, “ÿ”, “ÿ” in ordering food, etc. Only practice the meaning in this lesson, without extending to other meanings and usages, to avoid being too complicated and causing confusion for students.

b. Considering that adult learners have sufficient comprehension and self-learning abilities, some new words will first be broken down into several individual words, and then combined into phrases. For example, "sour and hot soup" is first divided into three words: "sour," "spicy," and "soup," and then listed as "sour and hot soup." In this way, students can learn words for two flavors (sour and spicy) and one common word (soup). A similar example is "chicken sandwich."

c. New vocabulary and phrases: Phrases are often composed of several words, such as "when," "weather forecast," and "much better." To make learning easier for students and teaching easier for teachers, teaching and practicing phrases as a whole is the best approach. The English translation of vocabulary follows this method, translating the meaning of the entire phrase. d. Some words have morphemes that can be used separately (experts call them separable words). These words are mostly verb-object structures, such as "fried tofu" and "washed hair." If the meaning of the verb and noun is complete, extensible, and frequently used, this textbook will list them as two words, such as "fried/tofu" and "washed/hair." Otherwise, they will appear as a whole word, such as "snowing," "surfing the internet," "shopping," and "taking a bath." The pinyin will indicate the verb-object structure (separable word structure) separately.

e. Explaining which words students are prone to misusing during learning, for teachers' reference. f. Suggesting practice methods for teachers when teaching vocabulary.

(3) Grammar instruction: a.

Explain the meaning and key points of each grammar rule. b.

Explain the meaning of the grammar in the most easily understandable way, and demonstrate how to use the grammar with example sentences, followed by exercises. This will reinforce the grammar point. The selected grammar points are all very basic and frequently used.

Machine Translated by Google

(4) Text Teaching: a. List the important sentences of the lesson, and the teacher should focus on these sentences during teaching. b. Suggest a teaching process for the class. A "segmented teaching" approach can be adopted, introducing the vocabulary and grammar of each segment in sequence. Vocabulary should be introduced according to the teaching objectives, not necessarily in the order of the vocabulary list. Some words that are listed later can be introduced first, but the number must be controlled. In this segmented approach, students can have diverse practice including vocabulary, grammar, and dialogue from the text in the first segment. The first segment can then be incorporated into the second segment, using the same model to interact with students, following the spiral concept of classroom teaching.

c. Provide examples of teaching questions and informational questions for the text to enhance classroom interaction between teachers and students.

(5) Comprehensive Activities:

a. Reading aloud and recognizing the text: The aim is to promote smooth speech, correct pronunciation, and also to strengthen the recognition of Chinese characters. ability.

b. Complete the sentences in the text: The purpose is to reinforce the sentences in the text and practice writing Chinese characters. If you have difficulty writing Chinese characters, You can use Zhuyin Pinyin instead.

c. Communication Task Activities: Practice listening and speaking through various authentic interactive activities. Some lessons also use authentic materials to improve reading comprehension. (6) Supplementary Text Teaching: Provide one supplementary exercise material for each lesson. Rewrite similar dialogues or short passages based on the vocabulary and grammar of the lesson for students to review. Teachers can use them as listening materials to train listening skills, or as reading materials to improve reading skills. 3. Textbook Exercise Answers: Including answers to grammar exercises and integrated activities. 4. Workbook Answers: Including the text of listening exercises. 5. Test Paper Answers. 6. Website Resource Extension Supplements: Including stroke order website and Chinese character animation. 7. One test paper. 8. Chinese

Character Writing Practice: List the Chinese characters that have not been written in the workbook.

III. Workbook Usage Guidelines 1. Text

Comprehension: To assess students' understanding of the lesson. This can be completed by the teacher in class, or students can complete it independently.

The student returned home to complete the task.

2. Listening Practice: Divided into three parts. The first part is distinguishing tones. The second part is distinguishing new words and sentences. The third part is listening to dialogues and answering questions, which is an exercise in understanding the overall content of the dialogue. Teachers can play the recording in class, complete part of the exercises, and let students practice the rest at home. Alternatively, students can practice once in class and then again at home to strengthen their listening skills. The textbook provides the recording files, which can be downloaded freely. 3. Matching Exercises: Using a question-and-answer format, this trains students' ability to respond correctly and appropriately. 4. Picture Interpretation: Using pictures to train students' ability to read sentences and understand them. 5. Reading Comprehension:

Reading a short passage rewritten from the vocabulary and grammar of the lesson, and then answering questions, thereby achieving further understanding.

Purpose of the exercise. Teachers can rewrite the questions provided in this exercise according to the students' needs.

6. Translation: Comprehensive practice. 7. Chinese character writing: Write 16-20 Chinese characters per lesson in the workbook. The rest can be placed at the end of the teacher's manual.

Lesson 1

The weather is great today.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Weather After

learning this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Name the four seasons. 2. Describe the weather in each season. 3. Compare weather conditions in different places. 4. Describe weather forecasts.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Prepare pictures of the four seasons, and then guide students to describe the four seasons.

2. Incorporate temperature information into pictures depicting the four seasons. Temperature can be indicated using a thermometer or by showing clothing to represent hot or cold conditions. Encourage students to naturally associate these with relevant vocabulary (using their native language), such as: cold, hot, comfortable, etc. The teacher then presents the Chinese equivalents.

3. The teacher uses the day's weather as an example, introducing the new vocabulary and key points of the lesson through questions. For example: Is it cold today?

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. The focus of this lesson is on the names of the four seasons: spring, summer, autumn, and winter. Words related to the weather in each season, such as "rain," "snow," and "sunny day," should also be introduced. The teacher may supplement with words related to "sunny day," such as "cloudy day" and "rainy day," as needed. 2. "Rain" and "snow" are verbs. In this lesson, practice their usage as "(place/season) it rains/it doesn't snow." If students use "heavy rain" or "heavy snow," explain that these two words (separable words) can be separated, and say "heavy rain" or "heavy snow."

Machine Translated by Google

3. The words used in this lesson to describe the feelings evoked by the weather, such as "cold," "hot," "comfortable," and "troublesome," are all stative verbs. Students should practice saying directly, "Spring is cold," "Summer is hot," and "Autumn is comfortable," rather than using phrases like "*Spring is cold," or "*Summer is very hot."

4. The new word "ÿ" in this lesson is an adverb. To emphasize affirmation, it is slightly stronger in degree than "ÿ" and often conveys a sense of surprise. The teacher can use "ÿÿÿÿ" (It's very cold today) and "ÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ!" (It's really cold today!) to illustrate the difference. 5.

The semantic differences between "ÿ" and "ÿ" in this lesson are significant. The teacher should first have students solidify their usage in this lesson to avoid errors when encountering other usages later.

6. "ÿÿ" (shíhou) is a time word, often used in the form of "……ÿÿ" (shíhou), therefore this lesson includes "……ÿÿ" as a phrase. During practice, the teacher will fill in the blanks with various verbs, such as: ÿÿÿÿ (xiàyÿshíhou), ÿÿÿ (xiàxuÿdÿng). At times, during meals, during work, etc.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. than

(1) The structure of "ÿ" is "A + ÿ + B + Vs". The key point of "ÿ" sentences is that a stative verb should be used to express the result of the comparison. Commonly used stative verbs include: ÿ (good), ÿ (more), ÿ (fewer), ÿ (big), ÿ (fast), ÿ (cold), ÿ (hot), etc. (2) In "ÿ" sentences, degree adverbs such as "ÿ (very), ÿ (really), ÿ (too), ÿÿ (extremely)" should not be added. For example, you cannot say "ÿÿÿÿÿÿ/ÿÿ". This is where students make the most mistakes. (3) In "ÿ" sentences, if it is necessary to express the result or degree of the comparison, these degree words need to be added after the stative verb, such as "ÿÿÿÿÿÿ" or "ÿÿÿÿÿÿ". This part is not taught in this lesson, and it is recommended that teachers not teach it actively, because students make a high frequency of mistakes. Teachers should start with the simplest ones to consolidate students' understanding and then gradually add more advanced ones. If students are proficient, teachers can supplement this part as needed.

2. Too...

(1) The word "ÿÿÿ" (tài hÿo le) already appeared in Lesson 9 of Book 1. At that time, it was only taught as a phrase.

(2) "ÿ……ÿ" (tài…le) is mostly used as a stative verb. There are two uses for "ÿ……ÿ". One is to indicate an excessive degree (high, many), which is mostly a bad situation. For example: It's too hot in summer. Sometimes "ÿ" can be omitted, such as: It's too hot in summer, I don't like it. The other use is to indicate a high degree, which is mostly used for praise and commendation. For example: The weather is so comfortable today!

3. Can

(1) "ÿ" is an auxiliary word and should be placed before the verb. The structure is: S + (Adv) + ÿ + V (O). (2) "ÿ" has multiple uses; in this lesson, "ÿ" means "possibly". When negating, use "ÿÿ" (cannot). For example... Grammar examples 1, 2, and 3. Usage.

(3) When asking a question using "ÿ" (as in example sentence 4 in the textbook), the answer is usually "ÿÿ" (can/may), and "ÿ" is not used alone. answer.

(1) "ÿ" is an auxiliary word and should be placed before the verb. The structure is: S + (Adverb) + ÿ + V (O).

(2) "ÿ" has multiple uses. In this lesson, "ÿ" means "possibly" and is mostly used in future situations (such as grammar examples 1-4), but it can also be used in the past (such as exercise sentence 4). When negating, use "ÿÿ".

(3) When asking a question with “ÿ” (as in example sentence 4 in the textbook), you can answer with “ÿÿ” alone.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson)

1. Summers here are more comfortable than in Taiwan.

2. What's the weather like in Taiwan? 3.

Springtime is very comfortable/very hot/very cold.

4. Springtime is neither too hot nor too cold.

5. Rain is a hassle. 6. You can't go for a run when it rains. 7. It will rain tomorrow.

Recommended process

1. The teacher reads sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Wang Mingwen and Gao Liya respectively. Students listen to the sentences first. (Teacher...)

You can speak while demonstrating new words or key sentences.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PowerPoint presentation and vocabulary cards to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into three parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar points. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, allowing them to focus on two or three sentences from each part initially. When teaching, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students will understand the meaning and be able to pronounce the sentences. Then, use other questions to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

Mingwen: Summers here are more comfortable than in Taiwan.
Lisa: What's the weather like in Taiwan?
Mingwen: Spring and autumn in Taiwan are very comfortable, neither too cold nor too hot, but summers are too hot.

(1) The teaching focus of this section: summer, spring, autumn, how, comfortable, neither too hot nor too cold, too hot ÿÿÿ.

(2) Show the sentence: "Summer here is more comfortable than summer in Taiwan."

Machine Translated by Google

Present the grammar "A + than + B + Vs" and ask students where A is and where B is.

(3) Explain the usage of "compare" sentences and the points to note. (4) The teacher has students do the textbook grammar exercises. (5)

Referring to the textbook grammar exercises, the teacher then gives students two things they have learned, such as two Chinese characters, quantities of things, or ages of people, and asks them to do "A + compare + B + Vs" substitution exercises to become familiar with the grammatical structure. Vocabulary is also practiced through grammar exercises.

4. Continue practicing the second and third sentences: "What is the weather like in Taiwan?" "Spring and autumn in Taiwan are very comfortable, neither cold nor hot, but summer is too hot." (1) The teacher first asks the students, "What is the weather like here?", and leads the students to say "Spring/Autumn here..."

The weather is very pleasant.

(2) The teacher then asks, "What is the weather like in Taiwan?" and leads the students to say, "Spring and autumn in Taiwan are very comfortable, neither cold nor hot." Then the teacher asks, "What is summer like in Taiwan?" and leads the students to say, "Summer in Taiwan is too hot."

(3) The teacher asks students questions based on their place of residence or other countries, providing further practice. For example: "Summer in California..." "How's the weather there?" "How's the weather in France?" 5. The teacher displays the three sentences again, but in a different order, and then does another exercise. See below:

A: What's the weather like in Taiwan?
B: Spring and autumn in Taiwan are very comfortable, neither too cold nor too hot, but summer is too hot.
A: Are the summers/winters here more comfortable/colder than the summers/winters in Taiwan?
B: Summer/winter here is _____ than summer/winter in Taiwan.

6. This lesson can be further divided into the following two parts. Based on the dialogue exercises in the first part, select the grammar points.

And vocabulary practice.

Part Two of the Text:

Lisa: What's the weather like in Taiwan in winter? Does it snow?
Mingwen: Winters aren't too cold, and it doesn't snow, but it rains often.
Lisa: It's troublesome when it rains.
Mingwen: Yes, I can't go for a run when it rains.

Part Three of the Text:

Lisa: The weather forecast says it might rain tomorrow. Plain Language:
I hope tomorrow will be sunny.

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display the sentences and mark the key vocabulary and grammar points.

(2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding the vocabulary and grammar.

(3) Have students practice the vocabulary and grammar and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

Machine Translated by Google

(4) Use the materials you have already learned to do extended exercises.

(5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using the key sentences in this section by asking questions.

7. After reading the entire text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) Does Lisa feel comfortable running here? (2) Does Mingwen think the weather here is better than in Taiwan? (3) What does Mingwen say about the weather in Taiwan in spring and autumn? (4) Is it cold in Taiwan in winter? (5) Does Lisa like rain? Why?

(6) What does the weather forecast say about tomorrow's weather? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (Information questions, allowing students to freely express their experiences and opinions)

(7) What is the weather like in your country? (8) What is the weather like where you live? (9) What kind of weather do you like?

(10) Do you find rainy weather troublesome? (11) Do you like snow? Why? (12) Where do you think the weather is the best?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it aloud individually in turns, correcting their pronunciation. 9. Have students practice retelling the text, aiming to enable them to summarize the key points of the text as a story.

In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Reading aloud and recognizing the text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly...

Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after recitation, understand the content of the dialogue, and use Chinese characters or spelling.

Write out the missing parts using phonetic transcription.

(2) Method: a. Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

Machine Translated by Google

c. Write Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level.

d. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so teachers can create additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be practiced.

3. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences and vocabulary learned in this lesson fluently. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind students of the sentences to use. b. Have students ask each other questions while completing a table. c. Ask students to report the opinions of the students they interviewed to the class. d. The teacher can also select two students to complete a dialogue in front of the class.

4. Expression Practice

(1) Objective: To train students to complete short essays according to their own ideas and report them orally.

(2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format.

b. Have students write down the activities they can and cannot do in each of the four seasons.

c. Students then complete the task according to the structure:

"I like it because I can go." "I don't like it because I can't go."

d. Ask students to take turns sharing their thoughts with the class.

5. Task Activities

(1) Objective: To train students to independently find information and report it in Chinese. (2) Method:

a. Ask students to go home and find a target country and research relevant information.

b. The teacher may require students to complete the report using the key vocabulary and grammar points from this lesson.

c. Ask students to report in the next class.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Mingwen lives in California, USA. He finds California summers more comfortable than Taiwanese summers because Taiwanese summers are too hot. Here, the weather is nice in both summer and winter, allowing him to go running and play tennis. He also loves the spring and autumn seasons because they are neither too hot nor too cold, and it doesn't rain often—he finds them truly comfortable!

Machine Translated by Google

Is the following statement correct?

(1. California summers are too hot.

(2. Mingwen felt that spring in California was neither too hot nor too cold.

(3. Mingwen doesn't go running in winter. 4. Mingwen likes the (weather in California.

ÿ Teaching Tips:

Teachers can flexibly adjust their teaching methods according to individual student needs or the learning environment. If students are still unwilling to learn Chinese characters or do not write them well after completing the first book, teachers can focus on listening, speaking, and recognizing Chinese characters first. Students are allowed to use phonetic symbols/Pinyin to practice listening and speaking first, while simultaneously learning Chinese characters, hoping to attract students' interest in writing Chinese characters.

Lesson 2

I want to buy gifts for my parents.

I. arning Objectives

Subject: Shopping

After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. State what gift you would like to buy for your family. 2. Explain the advantages of shopping online. 3. Compare the differences between shopping in different stores.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity Method:

Show pictures of Wang Ming-wen and Wang Chia-wen, review their relationship, and discuss why they are in the United States. This leads into the topic of Wang Chia-wen returning to Taiwan and needing to buy gifts for his family. 2. Ask students what gifts they would buy for their families and what gifts they would bring back for family or friends after returning from abroad. Introduce the vocabulary related to gifts introduced in this lesson.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. When someone goes to another country and wants to return to their own country, they should use "ÿÿ" (return to their home country) or "ÿÿ (return to Taiwan, the country's name)". When an American wants to return to the United States, they cannot say "ÿÿÿÿÿ" (I'm going to America), but rather "ÿÿÿÿ" (I'm going back to my home country) or "ÿÿÿÿÿ" (I'm going back to America). The same applies to "ÿÿ" (go home), so you cannot say "ÿÿÿÿ" (I'm going home). The sentence "ÿÿÿÿÿ" (I'm going to America) is correct, but its meaning is not the meaning of this lesson.

2. This lesson introduces two new measure words, "ÿ" (jiàn) and "ÿ" (hé), which need to be used correctly with nouns. Teachers can supplement with examples of usable items for practice. For example: "ÿÿÿ" (yÿ gè qún), "ÿÿÿ" (yÿ gè kù kuÿ) (new words like "ÿ" (qún qún) and "ÿ" (kù kuÿ) will appear in later lessons). The measure word for sunglasses is "ÿ" (gè) to reduce difficulty and avoid overwhelming the reader with too many measure words.

Machine Translated by Google

3. This lesson will include time-related words as grammar points and teach them together. The concepts are not difficult, but their usage is challenging. For example, students easily confuse "last week" and "next week," leading to many errors. Teachers can use a calendar for repeated practice.

4. For the four words "day," "week," "month," and "year," the measure word "ÿ" must be used for "week" and "month," but not for "day" and "year." "ÿ" can be omitted in "next (week)," but omitting "ÿ" in "month" completely changes the meaning; students should be reminded of this.

5. "ÿ" (tian, day) and "ÿ" (nian, year) can be considered as measure words. Students often use phrases like "one tian" and "one nian," which teachers should be aware of. Please correct this.

6. After learning "yesterday," students may directly infer "last year" from it; teachers must correct this. 7. The words "convenient" and "cheap" appear together in this lesson. Teachers must explain that some Chinese characters have multiple pronunciations, and different pronunciations mean different meanings. For example, "travel" and "bank" are examples of characters with multiple pronunciations. 8. In this lesson, "going online" and "shopping" are verb-object structures (separable verbs). Students will practice using them together first; later, they will be introduced separately. In situations where it is used, such as: going shopping.

9. The supplementary word "why" in this lesson appears in conjunction with the structure "because...therefore...". We must ask "why" in order to answer with "because...therefore...".

III. Grammar Teaching

1. Give

(1) In this lesson, "to give" means to benefit the person who follows. The structure is: "S + give (Prep) + someone + V" + O". (2)

Distinguish: (Lv Shuxiang, Modern Chinese 800 Words) Book 1, Lesson 7,

Grammar 2: "(person) calls (person)". In this lesson, "give" introduces the recipient of delivery or transmission. For example: I call him / My friend writes a letter to him. "Give" can also be placed after a verb, such as: I call him / The letter has been sent to him.

In this lesson, the "give" in "(person) buys (person) a gift" introduces the beneficiary of the action. For example: I buy gifts for my family / He makes dinner for me.

2. Time words: day, week, month, year

(1) Teachers can use calendars, monthly calendars, and learned action vocabulary to practice time. (2) Note that "weekdays" and "months" require the quantifier "ÿ" (ge). (3) Practice method:

2. What day of the week is tomorrow?
3. What day was last Monday?
4. What day is next Wednesday?
5. What month is next month?
6. What year is it this year?
7. Was last year 2022?
8. Is next year 2022?

3. Again and again...

(1) "ÿ……ÿ……" connects two words that are equivalent. If the first word has a good meaning, the second word should also be good. For example: It's both cheap and delicious. It can also connect negative things. For example: That piece of clothing is both expensive and ugly.

(2) The negative structure of "ÿ……ÿ……" uses "ÿ", and "ÿ" must be added before the stative verb. For example: It's neither cheap nor tasty.

4. Because...therefore...

(1) "Because...therefore..." connects two sentences with a cause-and-effect relationship. Both are used together to form a sentence structure. In Chinese, the cause (because) comes first, followed by the result (therefore). For example: Because I like shopping, I want to go to the department store to buy things. (2) This sentence structure is often introduced by asking "why". For example:

A: Why don't you go for a run?

B: I'm not going for a run because it's raining.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson)

1. I'm going back to Taiwan next week.
2. I want to buy gifts for my family. 3. It's more convenient to buy things online. 4. Online stores offer good quality products at low prices.

Machine Translated by Google

5. Because I like shopping, I want to go to a department store to buy it. 6. She likes to travel, so a backpack is very useful. _____

Recommended process

1. The teacher reads sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Wang Mingwen and Wang Jiawen respectively. Students listen to the sentences first. (Teacher...) You can speak while demonstrating new words or key sentences.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PowerPoint presentation and vocabulary cards to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into four parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to limit the amount of information students encounter initially, focusing on two or three sentences from each part. During the lesson, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

4. Divide the text of this lesson into four parts:

Jiawen: Big brother, I'm going back to Taiwan next week. I want to buy gifts for Mom and Dad this Saturday.

Plain text: What do you want to buy for them?

Jiawen: I want to buy Dad a hat, Mom a dress, and two boxes of chocolates.

Part Two of the Text:

Plain text: Do you want to buy it online? It's more convenient to buy things from online stores.

Jiawen: Online stores have good quality and cheap products. But because I like shopping in physical stores, I want to go to a department store. The company will buy it. Explicitly: Okay, I'm free this weekend, let's go to the department store to buy it.

Part Three of the Text:

Jiawen: I also want to buy a backpack for my sister.

Mingwen: Yes, she likes to travel, so a backpack is very useful. We could also buy her sunglasses.

Part Four of the text:

Jiawen: When are we going out on Saturday?

Plain text: One o'clock in the afternoon, okay?

Teaching process for each part of the text: (1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar.

(3) Have students practice vocabulary and grammar and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

(4) Use the materials you have already learned to do extended exercises.

Machine Translated by Google

(5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using key sentences in this section by asking questions about information.

5. Key points of the first part of the text: new words: next week, go back to Taiwan, gift name, measure word, give.

(1) Use pictures to show dates and practice "this week, next week". (2) Use pictures to show gifts in the textbook and ask students to name them and read the Chinese characters. (3) Introduce the sentence: Wang Mingwen:

"What do you want to buy for them?" Ask and answer, and have students say, "I want to buy them XX." (4) Ask students with informational questions, "What gifts do you want to buy for your family members on their birthdays?"

Review the grammar exercises in this lesson.

6. The second, third, and fourth parts of the text will all be read in this manner and process. 7. After reading the entire text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) When will Jiawen return to Taiwan? (2) What gifts does Jiawen want to buy for her parents?

(3) Where does Mingwen think it's most convenient to buy a gift? (4) Why doesn't Jiawen want to buy a gift online? (5) What gift does Jiawen want to buy for her sister? (6) Does Mingwen think buying a backpack is useful? Why? (7) When will Mingwen and the others go to buy a gift? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (Information questions, allowing students to freely express their experiences and opinions)

(8) What gifts do you give your family members for their birthdays? (9) Do you buy gifts for your family and friends when you come back from a trip? (10) Do you like to shop online? Why? (11) Do you like to go shopping? Where do you like to go shopping? (12) What kind of gifts do you think are useful?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it aloud individually in turns, correcting their pronunciation. 9. Have students practice retelling the text, aiming to enable them to summarize the key points of the text as a story.

In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Integrated Activities 1. Reading and

Recognizing the Text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly...

Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

Machine Translated by Google

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

(1) Objective: Students can memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after reciting them, understand the content of the dialogue, and write out the missing parts using Chinese characters or pinyin.

(2) Method: a. Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Writing Chinese characters or pinyin can be arranged according to the students' level. d. If students learn quickly and at a high level, the teacher can make additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be written.

3. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences and vocabulary learned in this lesson fluently. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind students of the sentences to be used. b. Have students ask each other questions, noting down each other's answers as they ask. c. Ask students to report the opinions of the students they interviewed to the class. d. The teacher can also select two students to complete a dialogue in front of the whole class.

4. Task Activities

(1) Objective: To train students to obtain information using the required sentence structure and complete the dialogue. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format.

b. Ask students to choose pictures and ask four classmates questions according to a set of sentence patterns.

c. After the interview, the teacher asked the students to take turns sharing the thoughts of a particular classmate.

d. The teacher may also select two students to complete the dialogue in front of the whole class.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials : Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Wang Mingwen is going back to Taiwan next month and wants to buy gifts for his family. Since his parents both enjoy sports, he wants to buy them running clothes. Taiwan summers are very hot, so he thinks sunglasses are very useful and wants to buy them for his parents as well. His younger sister loves chocolate, so he wants to buy her three boxes.

Machine Translated by Google

Is the following statement correct?

(1. Mingwen is returning to China this week.

(2. Mingwen wants to buy clothes for his parents. 3.

(Sunglasses are useful because summers in Taiwan are too hot. 4. Mingwen will buy (three boxes of chocolates for his younger sister.

Lesson 3

The braised fish was delicious.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Food and Taste After learning

this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Name the food. 2.

Describe the taste and preparation method of the food. 3. Express your liking for the food. 4. Order food in a restaurant.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity Method:

Prepare pictures of Chinese restaurants, as well as several pictures of common Chinese dishes found in local restaurants. 2. The teacher asks students if they recognize these dishes, have eaten them, and like them. Questions can be asked in the students' native language, and students are also welcome to ask in their own language.

The student answered in their mother tongue.

3. The teacher displays pictures of the dishes along with their Chinese characters (pinyin), introducing the names of several dishes. This leads into the lesson.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. The food names in this lesson—"fish," "tofu," "vegetables," "steamed buns," "hot and sour soup," and "white rice"—are all very common. Students should be able to name them. 2.

Vocabulary related to cooking methods is key. Use pictures to demonstrate methods such as "braised," "fried," and "stir-fried." This can also be extended to other dishes, such as braised pork belly, fried chicken, fried rice, and fried noodles.

3. The measure words “plate”, “bowl”, and “bottle” in this lesson are commonly used in food and drink. The teacher will teach them together with dishes and drinks.

Machine Translated by Google

4. The three characters for "hot and sour soup" are listed as separate vocabulary words because each character is a commonly used word, allowing teachers more flexibility in teaching the taste of food. For example, chili peppers are very spicy, and fruits are very sour. 5. Teachers can supplement the distinction between "baozi" (steamed buns) and "doushabao" (red bean buns). The former is a general term for this type of food, while "doushabao," "xiaolongbao," and "caibao" each have their own specific fillings and preparation methods.

6. The words "ÿ" (diÿn) and "ÿÿ" (diÿncài) appear twice in this lesson. Since "ÿÿ" is a separable verb, you can say "ÿÿÿÿ" (diÿn shénme cài). To reduce the difficulty of explanation, the teacher can teach it in two ways. First, practice with "ÿÿÿ+N (ÿÿÿÿÿÿÿ)". Then, when talking to a waiter, say "ÿÿÿÿ" (wÿmeng diÿncài).

7. "I heard" means "I heard from others" and is often placed at the beginning of a sentence. For example, "I heard that the steamed buns at this restaurant are delicious." It can also be placed in the middle of a sentence, such as, "I heard that the weather in Taiwan is very hot in the summer." Teachers can use "I heard" to start many topics related to students, which is beneficial for practicing vocabulary and grammar. For example, "I heard that you like to eat..., which restaurant do you think is the best?"

III. Grammar Teaching 1. Qpr

+ N + all

(1) This lesson introduces the usage of interrogative pronouns (what, who, where, when) to indicate any reference. They are often placed before "all" or "also" to indicate that there are no exceptions within the scope of what is being said. For example, "I eat all kinds of fish" means that I eat all kinds of fish. "I don't eat any kinds of fish" means that I don't eat any kinds of fish.

(2) Students do not easily use this grammar naturally and often need someone to ask them questions so that they can use it when answering. Therefore, teachers must use various questions to practice this grammar. For example, if the teacher asks, "Do you like to eat fish?" and the student has already learned to answer "I do," the teacher must follow up with, "Do you like to eat every kind of fish?" At this point, the student must answer with this grammar, "I like to eat all kinds of fish." (3) The teacher can also show multiple pictures of vegetables at the same time, such as "spinach, broccoli, and cabbage." Then ask the students, "Do you like to eat spinach?" and "Do you like to eat broccoli?" After asking each one, if the student answers "I like them all," the teacher can lead in "I like all kinds of vegetables." The premise of this teaching method is that the student must either "like them all" or "dislike them all."

2. A or B (1) In this lesson, "or" is a conjunction indicating a choice. (2) When practicing, the teacher provides two things and then asks the students for their choice. For example: Do you prefer spring or autumn?

3. Bar

(1) In this lesson, "ÿ" indicates making a suggestion. The sentence "Let's go have coffee!" was already taught in Lesson 10 of Book 1. Considering that it would not increase the burden on students in Book 1, it was not listed as grammar. It appears again in this lesson for explanation.

(2) The teacher presents scenarios for students to choose from, naturally leading to student suggestions in their responses. For example: "Teacher: Shall we order beer or cola? Student: Let's order beer!" "Teacher: What should we eat for lunch? (Teacher holds up pictures of hamburgers and pizza) Student: Let's have hamburgers!"

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The following points are the key learning points of this lesson) 1. This restaurant's braised fish is delicious. 2.

I love fish; I love all kinds of fish. 3. Would you like tofu or vegetables?

4. We'll order one..., one plate..., three bowls...

5. Hot and sour soup is both sour and spicy, it's so delicious!

6. Let's order a bowl of hot and sour soup! 7. I heard this restaurant makes really good steamed buns.

Recommended process

1. The teacher speaks sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Wang Mingwen, Lisa, and Gao Liya. Students listen to the sentences first. The teacher can display pictures of new words or key sentences while speaking.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into three parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, focusing them on two or three sentences from each part initially. During the lesson, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

4. Divide the text of this lesson into three parts:

Mingwen: Lisa, the braised fish at this restaurant is really good, it's delicious. Lisa: I love fish, I love all kinds of fish. Mingwen: Lisa, would you like tofu or vegetables? Lisa: I want to eat tofu, and I also want to eat green vegetables. Mingwen: Okay, let's order a braised fish, a fried tofu, a plate of stir-fried vegetables, and three bowls of white rice.

Part Two of the Text:

Mingwen: What else would you like to eat? Gao Liya: Let's order a bowl of hot and sour soup too! Hot and sour soup is so delicious, it's both sour and spicy! Lisa: Great! I want hot and sour soup too. And I'll also get a bottle of beer.

Part Three of the Text:

Gao Liya: I heard that this restaurant makes pretty good steamed buns.
Lisa: Well then, how about we order two red bean buns too?

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar.

(3) Have students practice new words and grammar, and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

(4) Use the materials you have already learned to do extended exercises. (5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using the key sentences in this section by asking questions.

5. Key points of the first part of the text: vocabulary: braised fish, fried tofu, stir-fried vegetables, measure words (plate, bowl), what. All... or still.

(1) Show pictures of the dishes in this lesson and guide students to practice saying the names of the dishes until they are fluent. Correct their pronunciation to ensure you understand what they want to order. Pay special attention to "tofu," avoiding a pronunciation similar to the English word "tofu." (2) Practice using the cooking methods "braised," "fried," and "stir-fried." Use examples of other common foods for practice, such as braised pork belly, etc. Braised beef, fried chicken, French fries, fried rice, fried noodles, etc.

(3) Substitute the sentence: Gao Liya: "I like to eat fish the most, I like to eat all kinds of fish." The teacher asks the student: "What do you like to eat the most?" The student says: "I like to eat XX." The teacher asks: "Do you eat all kinds of XX?" Practice this repeatedly until you are proficient.

(4) The teacher shows two pictures of vegetables and asks, "Do you want to eat tofu or green vegetables?" Let the students answer freely. They can answer, such as "I like to eat..." or "I like to eat... and I also like to eat...". Practice in this way.

(5) The teacher shows a picture of a dish and introduces the corresponding measure words, asking students to match them one by one using the format "one + measure word + noun". Practice until you are proficient.

(6) Ask students informational questions, such as, "What is your favorite dish? Why?" or "What do you dislike eating?" "What dish? Why?" Practice repeatedly.

6. The second and third parts of the text will be conducted in this process and manner.

7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example questions: (Teaching questions, based on the content of the textbook, to check whether students understand) (1) How is the braised fish at this restaurant? (2) What kind of fish does Gao Liya like to eat? (3) What dish does Lisa want to eat? (4) What does Gao Liya say about hot and sour soup? (5) What else did Lisa order? (6) What did Gao Liya hear? (7) What dishes did the three of them order? ("ÿ" has not yet been taught, the teacher will explain as needed)

Machine Translated by Google

(8) How many bowls of white rice did they order? Students are asked to answer the following questions based on their own experience: (Information questions to allow students to freely express their experiences and opinions) (9) Do you think braised fish/tofu/vegetables/hot and sour soup/white rice is delicious? (10) Do you eat all kinds of fish/vegetables?

(11) Do you like drinking beer? (12) What Chinese dishes have you eaten? ("ÿ" has not been taught yet, the teacher will explain as appropriate) (13) What Chinese dishes do you not like?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, and then have them read the text aloud individually in turn, while correcting their pronunciation.

9. Have students complete narration exercises based on the text, aiming to enable them to retell the key points of the text in a storytelling style.

In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Reading aloud and recognizing the text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly...

Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Method:

a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups. b.

The teacher calls on students to take turns reading the dialogue aloud.

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

(1) Objective: Students can memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after reciting them, understand the content of the dialogue, and write out the missing parts using Chinese characters or pinyin.

(2) Method:

a. Have students fill in the dialogue. b. The teacher calls on students to read or write down the answers. c. Have students write Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on their level.

d. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so teachers can create additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be practiced.

3. Reading and writing activities

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the measure words learned in this lesson fluently. (2)

Method: a. Ask students to look at the pictures and fill in the appropriate measure words. b.

Ask some students to give their answers.

4. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the sentences and vocabulary learned in this lesson fluently.

(2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind you of the sentences to be used.

b. Have students ask each other questions, and write down each other's answers as they ask. c. The teacher asks students to report the opinions of the students they interviewed to the whole class. d. The teacher can also select two students to complete a dialogue in front of the whole class.

5. Task Activities

(1) Objective: To train students to create dialogues using the vocabulary and grammar of this lesson. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format. b. Give students time to discuss what each character should say. c. Students perform on stage. It's best to speak naturally, rather than referring to a script. d. If class time is insufficient, ask students to prepare at home and perform in the next class.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Next Friday is Gao Liya's birthday, and Wang Mingwen invited her to a restaurant for dinner. Gao Liya likes fish, but she doesn't eat any vegetables. Both Wang Mingwen and Gao Liya like tofu, but they don't like fried tofu. So Wang Mingwen ordered a fried fish, a braised tofu, and a bowl of hot and sour soup.

Is the following statement correct?

(1. Gao Liya's birthday is next Friday. 2. Gao Liya doesn't like to (eat any kind of fish. 3. Wang Mingwen doesn't like to eat (fried tofu.

(4. Wang Mingwen ordered braised fish and braised tofu.

ÿ Note: The verb + ÿ (le) indicating completion has not yet been taught. Teachers can use short narrative passages to briefly explain the usage of ÿ. This grammar point will be taught later in this book.

Culture Unit (I)

Chinese gift-giving customs

Chinese people enjoy giving gifts to friends during traditional festivals to wish them peace and success. Gifts are also given to congratulate family members on birthdays, graduations, or promotions. Bringing a gift is also a polite and sincere gesture when visiting someone's home for the first time. Given the frequent gift-giving among Chinese people, what are some common customs and taboos associated with it?

When Chinese people give gifts, they often choose items that symbolize good fortune. For example, when visiting a friend's home, you might buy a box of apples for their parents because "apple " (ÿ) sounds the same as "peace" (ÿ). "Apple " (ÿÿ) represents "peace" (ÿÿ). It's common to give six or eight apples; "six" (ÿ) means "smooth sailing" (ÿÿ), and "eight" (ÿ) means " wealth " (ÿÿ). However, it's important to note that you should never give four apples, as "four" (ÿ) sounds like "death" (ÿ).

Gifts that should absolutely not be given include "ÿ" (zhong, clock) and "ÿ" (san, umbrella). "ÿÿ" (sòng zhong) sounds like "ÿÿ" (sòng zhong), meaning to attend to someone's funeral. "ÿ" (zhong) signifies death, and "ÿÿ" (sòng zhong) means to hold a funeral for the deceased; therefore, giving a clock is inappropriate. "ÿ" (san, umbrella) sounds like "ÿ" (sàn), meaning to scatter or separate . Giving an umbrella implies a desire to separate from the recipient.

Lesson 4

I'd like a hot coffee.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Ordering Drinks After learning this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Order drinks in a coffee shop. 2. Name the drinks and snacks. 3. Express your preferences for drinks and snacks.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity Method:

Use beverage pictures from the text to introduce new vocabulary. For example, for the picture of "coffee," students have already learned the vocabulary.

The teacher can then use pictures to introduce the word "black tea".

2. We've already learned about "hot" in the first lesson, so we can naturally introduce hot coffee. Then, we can introduce "iced coffee" instead of "cold."

"Coffee". "Iced coffee" and "cold coffee" have different meanings.

3. New vocabulary related to coffee, such as "sugar" and "milk," can be introduced along with the text. Use the question, "Do you add sugar or milk to your coffee?" to introduce the lesson. Using pictures and actions as aids will help students immediately understand the meaning of "adding sugar" and "adding milk."

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. The names of liquid foods, "beverages, coffee, black tea, milk, (ice) water," are frequently used in this lesson and students must memorize them. The names of food items,

"sandwiches, chicken, cake, sugar," form another group of vocabulary that students must memorize. Since these are all nouns, the teacher will repeatedly lead the students in reading them aloud using pictures, and after the students have memorized them, the teacher will introduce other verbs for further practice.

Machine Translated by Google

2. Besides the names of the drinks, the key words for this lesson are "sweet" and "salty". You can use phrases like "cake is sweet" and "chicken sandwich is salty" to introduce the flavors. Then, use easily understood nouns like "sugar is sweet" and "salt (supplement) is salty" to help you remember the vocabulary related to flavors.

3. In this lesson, the words "ÿ" (big), "ÿ" (medium), and "ÿ" (small) are all marked with "Vs (stative verb)". However, "ÿ" and "ÿ" can function as attributive modifiers of nouns, such as "large cup of coffee" and "small child," and can also be used as predicates, such as "the cup is too small" and "the gift is very large." The word "ÿ" (medium) can only function as an attributive modifier of nouns, such as "medium cup of coffee" and "medium-sized clothes," and cannot be used as a predicate. Therefore, one cannot say "the cup is (very) medium." This textbook uses a simpler method for marking parts of speech, highlighting the most frequently used parts. Teachers are requested to explain any subtle differences.

4. The measure word "ÿ" (kuài) in this lesson is used for cakes, chocolates (a new word in Lesson 2), meat, etc. Teachers can add other foods for practice. The usage of "ÿÿÿ" (yÿkuài qián, one yuan) will appear in the next lesson and can be omitted in this lesson. 5. "ÿ" (jÿ, chicken), "ÿ" (ròu, meat), and "ÿÿ" (sÿnfÿn, sandwich) are listed as three separate new words, mainly because all three can be used independently and are frequently used. Using the previously learned beef noodles as an example, introduce "ÿ+ÿ+N" (niú + ròu + N), then use "ÿ+ÿ," "ÿ+ÿ," and "ÿ+ÿ" (jÿ + ròu, pork + ròu, fish + ròu) to introduce common meats. This can also be extended to common foods such as beef sandwiches and chicken pies. Teachers should explain that in Chinese, "ÿ" (ròu) is a general term for all meats, and "ÿÿ" (jÿjÿ) is not translated as "chicken + N". meatÿÿ

6. Following the teaching of "comparison sentences," students gradually learn grammar and expressions related to comparison. It's best to practice "same" together with other grammar exercises. This lesson only teaches "A is the same as B Vs." Depending on the students' level, phrases like "They are the same size" and "These things are the same price" can be taught. As long as the subject is plural, "A is the same as B Vs" is not required. The phrase "B..." is used. 7.

When practicing "other," first practice with "other + N." The teacher can use concrete objects for practice. For example: other dishes, other people, other schools, other companies. Then, introduce the usage of omitting the following noun in this lesson. For example: Do you want anything else? I don't want to buy this, I want to buy something else.

III. Grammar Teaching 1. The

"ÿ" Phrases (1) The usage of "ÿ" in this lesson is different from that in Lesson 4 of Book 1. (2) In the phrase "modifier + ÿ + noun (N)," if the noun (N) referred to by the following noun is clear and both speakers know it, the noun (N) following "ÿ" can be...

The word "omitted" in used to indicate the omission of the word "omitted".

For example: A: I want a cup of coffee.

B: Would you like your coffee hot or iced?

A: I want it iced.

(3) The omission of this phrase is a common usage and requires more practice. Teachers can use the names of drinks and foods from this lesson to ask questions, such as: Do you want a large or small cup? Do you want it hot or cold? Do you want it sweet or salty? Practice repeatedly.

Machine Translated by Google

2. If..., then...

(1) Structure: "If + S1 + V1, then S1 + (Adv) + V2 + (O)". This means "assuming the previous..."

"When the situation in a sentence occurs, the subsequent result will follow."

(2) If the subject (S) of the two sentences is the same person, then the subject (S) of the second sentence can be omitted. For example: If I am busy, I will not go for a run. If the subjects (S) of the two sentences are different, each subject (S) must appear, and the second subject must precede "then". For example: If you go, I will go.

(3) A common mistake students make is placing the second subject after "ÿ" (jiù), such as: "*If you go running, "I'll go for a run with you."

3. A is the same as B

(1) This grammar needs to be taught in three parts. The first is the simplest structure, "A is the same as B". When practicing, the teacher can use two identical things as examples for drills. For example: His backpack is the same as mine. The coffee he likes is the same as the coffee I like.

(2) After the structure "A is the same as B", add a stative verb, "A is the same as B Vs". For example: Chinese and French is just as difficult. His backpack is just as nice/expensive/cheap as mine.

(3) Using examples of people, introduce other sentences after "A is the same as B". For example: Gao Liya and Lisa both want a chicken sandwich. I and the teacher both like to drink coffee. (4) When students use "than" and "A is the same as B", they often combine the two, such as: "A "Just like B. " A common error is "*Coffee tastes just as good as black tea."

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson) 1. I want a cup of coffee, with milk, no sugar.

2. Would you like it hot or cold?

3. Would you like a large, medium, or small?

4. Anything else?

5. If you order a chicken sandwich, we'll give you a complimentary drink.

6. I ordered a chicken sandwich, just like her.

Recommended process

1. The teacher reads sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Lisa and Goliath respectively. Students listen to the sentences first. The teacher may...

While speaking, show pictures of new words or key sentences.

Machine Translated by Google

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into three parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, focusing them on two or three sentences from each part initially. During the lesson, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

4. Divide the text of this lesson into three parts:

Goria: Miss, I'd like a coffee, with milk, no sugar.
Waiter: Okay, would you like it hot or cold?
Goria: Hot.
Waiter: Would you like a large, medium, or small? Gao Liya: A large.

Part Two of the Text:

Waiter: What would you like to drink? Lisa: I'd like a small iced tea.
Waiter: Would you like anything else?
Goria: I want another piece of cake.

Part Three of the Text:

Goria: I want another piece of cake. Lisa, do you want one?
Lisa: The cake is too sweet, I want something savory. Miss, do you have chicken sandwiches? Waiter: Yes, if you order a chicken sandwich, we'll give you a complimentary drink.
Lisa: Okay, I'll take one.
Goria: Miss, I'd like a chicken sandwich, just like her.
Lisa: Miss, we'd like two more glasses of ice water.

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar points. (2)

Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar. (3)

Have students practice vocabulary and grammar, and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

(4) Use previously learned materials to do extended exercises.

(5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using key sentences in this section by asking questions about information.

5. Key points of the first part of the text, new words: add, sugar, milk, hot, iced, large cup, medium cup, small cup.

Machine Translated by Google

(1) Show pictures of sugar, milk, and three sizes of coffee. First, guide students to practice saying "with sugar, no milk" or "no sugar, no milk" until they are fluent. Pronunciation needs to be corrected, especially for "milk". (2) Then practice words such as "large", "medium", and "small". The teacher asks: Do you want a large, medium, or small cup?

Students choose one of the sizes to answer.

(3) (1)(2) Students can practice asking each other questions in pairs until they are familiar with the two ways of ordering drinks. Pay attention to whether students can correctly use the abbreviated nouns. Avoid sentences such as "I want a large cup" or "I want hot". (4) Depending on the students' level, the teacher can show pictures of different flavors of coffee and ask: "Do you want to drink XX or XX?"

Let students answer freely, and at this time you can add different kinds of coffee.

(5) Ask students informational questions, such as, "What's your favorite coffee? Why?" or "What don't you like to drink?"

Coffee? Why? Practice repeatedly.

6. The second and third parts of the text will follow the same process and method. 7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text. Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) Should Gao Liya order a large or small coffee? (2) Is Gao Liya's coffee sweet? Why? (3) What drink should Lisa order?

(4) Who ordered the cake?

(5) Why didn't Lisa like the cake? (6) How many chicken sandwiches did they order? (7) They ordered drinks; would they like some ice water too? (8) How many dishes did they order? Students are asked to answer the following questions based on their own experiences: (Information questions to allow students to freely express their experiences and opinions)

(9) Do you think coffee tastes good with just milk? (10) What kind of coffee do you like? Why? (11) Which coffee shop do you think tastes the best? (12) Do you like cake? Which cake shop is the best? (13) Do you prefer chicken sandwiches or beef sandwiches? Why? (14) Do you prefer sweet or savory foods?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it aloud individually in turns, correcting their pronunciation. 9. Have students practice retelling the text, aiming to enable them to summarize the key points of the text as a story.

In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Reading aloud and recognizing the text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly... Pronounce it correctly.

d. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so teachers can create additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be practiced.

3. Reading and writing activities

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use the measure words learned in this lesson fluently. (2) Method:

a. Ask students to look at the pictures and fill in the appropriate measure words.

b. Select some students to give the answer.

4. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to fluently express their preferences for beverages using what they have learned in this lesson. (2)

Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind participants of the new vocabulary and sentences to be used.

b. Have students ask each other questions, and write down each other's answers as they ask. c. The teacher asks students to report to the class on the preferences of the students they interviewed.

d. The teacher may also select two students to complete the dialogue in front of the whole class.

5. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully use what they have learned in this lesson to express their preferences for food and flavors. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind students of the vocabulary and sentences to be used. b. Have

6. Reading Authentic Text Corpus

(1) Objective: Students can use what they have learned to guess the meaning of the words used in advertisements.

(2) Method: After reading, students answer questions. The focus is on recognizing and reading the characters "ÿ" (buy) and "ÿ" (give away). understand.

VI. Supplementary Teaching of the Text

1. Practice using the phrase "If...then..."

a. Ask the student: "If you had time to travel abroad, which place (country) would you like to go to? Why?"

b. Ask students to report these points themselves, using phrases like, "If I had time, I would like to go to...? Because that..." inside……. "

	Goria	student
Which country do you want to travel to? Taiwan
When would you like to go?	I want to go in spring because the weather is nice and not cold. It's not hot either.
what you up to?	I want to drink bubble tea and eat beef noodles.

2. The teacher may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. The teacher may read the dialogue aloud themselves.

Training students' listening skills can also be done by creating handouts for reading practice.

Lisa and Gao Liya went to a coffee shop to buy drinks during their lunch break. Lisa ordered a large hot coffee. Golia ordered a medium iced tea. Lisa likes to have something sweet with her coffee, so she also ordered... A slice of chocolate cake. Goria doesn't like sweet cakes; she only drinks a glass of iced tea.

Is the following statement correct?

(1. Lisa drinks coffee, and so does Golia.

(2. Lisa ordered a large iced coffee.

(3. Goria likes to eat cake.

(4. Gao Liya only drinks iced tea.

Lesson 5

How about this coat?

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Shopping (Part 2) After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Name the garment. 2. Name the garment's color, size, and price. 3. Express your liking and evaluation of the garment. 4. State the payment method when shopping.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity

Method: Use clothing images paired with a department store (shopping mall) background to create a shopping scenario.

Ask students where they bought these clothes, first simulating the scenario of shopping in a physical store.

2. Show common online shopping website pages to help students review the online shopping scenario from Lesson 2. Ask students where they like to buy clothes, thus introducing the theme of this lesson.

3. Ask about the price of the clothes the students are wearing, thus introducing the key concept of "money" from this lesson. You can first say it in your native language and then switch to Chinese.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. Lesson

2 already taught the general term "clothes." This lesson will teach other specific clothing terms such as "outerwear," "skirt," "trousers (long pants)," and "sweatshirt." These are broader categories of clothing vocabulary. Teachers can supplement with terms like "long skirt," "short skirt," "shorts," "jacket," and "top," depending on students' abilities. For "sweatshirt," the direct English translation "T-shirt" can be added as appropriate. The number of supplementary words should not be excessive to avoid overwhelming students.

Machine Translated by Google

2. The colors "blue, black, and white" are the focus of this lesson. We'll also incorporate the "red" from the braised fish we learned in Lesson 3, practicing color words before clothing items. For example: white coat, red skirt, black sweatshirt. 3. Continuing from the "large, medium, and small" concept in Lesson 4, this lesson teaches "large (L), medium (M), and small (S)." If students request other size designations, the teacher can supplement them. For example: XL (extra large).

4. The measure word for clothing, "ÿ" (jiàn), was already learned in Lesson 2. This lesson introduces "ÿ" (tiáo), as in: ÿÿÿÿ (tiáo yÿ cháng kù), ÿ (yÿ)... A skirt.

5. When teaching "How much?" in this lesson, the common colloquial expression "~ yuan" will be used. While the usage of "~ yuan" may appear in more formal or written announcements, this book focuses on everyday colloquial usage to avoid overwhelming students, and will not discuss the "~ yuan" expression. 6. The vocabulary related to payment in this lesson includes "pay money," "cash," "swipe card," and "credit card." "Pay money" is a general term for paying after purchasing something; it is a verb-object structure and cannot be followed by an object. Students should be reminded to avoid misuse, with common errors including "*pay money in cash" and "*pay money with credit card." "Swipe card" is a verb-object structure meaning "swipe credit card," and students should be prevented from making the error "swipe card with credit card."

7. This lesson teaches the units of money as "kuai," "mao," and "fen." Although Taiwan does not use "mao" and "fen," many countries still do. It may be used; teachers may decide whether to teach according to the monetary units in the textbook, depending on local conditions.

8. It is easier to teach the new word "ÿ" together with grammar.

III. Grammar Teaching 1.ÿ

(The New Situation withÿ)

(1) In this lesson, "ÿ" is used at the end of a sentence when a new situation arises or the original situation changes. Express.

(2) The teacher first uses two concrete pictures to illustrate when to use "ÿ". For example, first show a picture of summer heat, then a picture of winter snow, and then say "It's cold." If the pictures are reversed, you can say "It's hot," indicating a change in weather. The second set of exercises can use two sets of numbers, one showing high and one low food prices, to practice "Things have become more expensive." The third exercise involves situations that were previously present but are no longer present, such as someone who used to enjoy drinking but now doesn't, saying "He doesn't drink anymore." Through different scenarios, students can easily grasp the key points and learn to use "ÿ".

2. Although...but...

(1) Although is a conjunction, it is often placed in the first sentence, and the second sentence is often paired with "but", "however", "still" etc.

(2) Use "although" to acknowledge the fact in the first sentence, but the situation in the second sentence remains unchanged. For example: Although it's very hot, I still want to go for a run. (3) "Although" can be placed before or after the subject. (4) The teacher states some common situations students encounter, and then asks a rhetorical question. Students can respond with sentences to refute the statement. For example: Teacher: Hot and sour soup is both sour and spicy, do you like to drink it? Student: Although hot and sour soup...

Machine Translated by Google

It's sour and spicy, but I love drinking it. If a student doesn't like hot and sour soup, they can't use this sentence structure, and the teacher should ask a different question.

3. Monetary Units (1) The Chinese currency is expressed as “~kuai~mao~fen+qian”, such as: ten yuan nine mao nine fen (10.99). (2) The numbers taught in this lesson only go up to “one hundred yuan”. If the local currency is larger, the teacher can add “thousand”, such as: one thousand five hundred yuan.

(3) When saying "$106" in Chinese, a zero must be added, such as "one hundred and six dollars". It is not acceptable to say "*one hundred and six dollars". When saying "$110", a one must be added, such as "one hundred and ten dollars". It is not acceptable to say "*one hundred and ten dollars". Students must practice the correct way to say Chinese currency (numbers). (4) "$200" is said as "two hundred dollars" in Taiwan and "two hundred dollars" in mainland China. If students hear different ways of saying it, they should ask the teacher to explain.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson)

1. How's this coat? 2. It looks nice, and the color is great too. 3. Do you wear a medium?

4. I've gained weight recently.

5. Give it a try!

6. Although this dress is very beautiful, it's too expensive.

7. How much does it cost in total?

8. Would you like to pay by card or cash?

Recommended process

1. The teacher reads sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Lisa and Goliath respectively. Students listen to the sentences first. The teacher may... While speaking, show pictures of new words or key sentences.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into three parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, focusing them on two or three sentences from each part initially. During the lesson, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Divide the text of this lesson into three parts:

Part One of the Text:

Gao Liya: What do you think of this coat? Lisa: It looks nice, and the color is lovely too. Gao Liya: The blue one is really pretty, but I want to buy a black one. Lisa: Do you wear a medium? Gao Liya: I've gained weight recently, so the medium size is too small, I need to wear the large size.

Part Two of the Text:

Lisa: What do you think of this dress? I want to buy a white dress. Gao Liya: It looks great, try it on! Lisa: Although this dress is very pretty, it's too expensive, it costs 120 yuan. Gao Liya: Then, how about these trousers?

Part Three of the Text:

Gao Liya: Miss, how much is it in total? Cashier: Two sweatshirts, a pair of trousers, and a jacket, totaling 116.5 yuan. Would you like to pay by card or cash? Gao Liya: Swipe your card. This is my credit card. Cashier: Here are your things, thank you! Welcome back.

Teaching process for each part of the text: (1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar.

(2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar.

(3) Have students practice new words and grammar, and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

(4) Use previously learned materials for extended practice. (5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using key sentences from this part by asking informational questions. 5. Key points of the first part of the text, new words: color, blue, black, large, medium, fat.

(1) Show pictures of blue, black, white, and red coats in three sizes. First, ask the students, "What color is this?" The students answer, "Blue, black..." The teacher adds pictures of coats and asks the students, "What color is this coat?" The students answer, "Blue coat, black coat..." The teacher adds pictures of the sizes and asks the students, "Is this a large coat?" The students answer, "This is a large coat / No, it's a medium coat..." The teacher can combine the two sets of sentences as needed and ask the students to say, "This is a blue, large coat." Practice adding modifiers to the beginning of nouns to lengthen sentences. Here, each modifier must be separated by a comma. (2) Ask again, "Does Gao Liya wear a medium-sized coat?" After the students answer, the teacher asks based on the answers, "Why is a medium-sized coat too small for Gao Liya? / Why does Gao Liya wear a large size?".

Machine Translated by Google

The teacher presents the sentence, "Goliya has gained weight." The teacher then adds "Because..., therefore..." and asks the students to repeat the sentence. If needed, the teacher can add the phrase "I have lost weight."

(3) Ask students informational questions: "What color coat (clothes) do you like?" "You wear a large size?" "Or a medium-sized garment?" Let students answer freely. 6. The second and third parts of the text will follow the same process and method. 7. After leading the class in reading the text again, ask questions based on the text.

Example Questions: (Teaching questions, based on textbook content, to check students' understanding) (1) What clothes does Gao Liya want to buy? (2) What do you think of the coat Gao Liya is looking at? (3) What color coat does Gao Liya want to buy? (4) Why does Gao Liya need to buy a large coat? (5) What does Lisa want to buy? (6) Does Lisa think the white dress looks good? (7) Do you think Lisa bought (or did) the white dress? (8) How much did their clothes cost in total? (9) Did they pay by card or cash? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (Information questions, allowing students to freely express their experiences and opinions) (10) What color clothes do you like? (11) What color coat/skirt/pants do you think looks good? (12) How much do you think clothes cost? (13) If there is a pair of trousers that is expensive (over $200), would you buy it? (14) When you usually buy things, do you prefer to pay by card or cash? Why? (15) Do you know any other ways to pay? (The method was not taught; the teacher will provide supplementary explanations.) 8. Have students practice reciting the text in groups, and then have students take turns reciting the text individually, while correcting their pronunciation.

9. Have students complete narration exercises based on the text, aiming to enable them to retell the key points of the text in a storytelling style. In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Integrated Activities 1. Reading and Recognizing the Text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly... Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

Machine Translated by Google

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

(1) Objective: Students can memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after reciting them, understand the content of the dialogue, and write out the missing parts using Chinese characters or pinyin.

(2) Method: a. Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Writing Chinese characters or pinyin can be arranged according to the students' level. d. If students learn quickly and at a high level, the teacher can make additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be written.

3. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully use what they have learned in this lesson to describe changes in the past and present situations. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind participants of the vocabulary and sentences to be used. The phrase "I used to..., now..." should be used. "It's here..."

b. Have students ask each other questions, and write down each other's answers as they ask. c. The teacher asks students to report to the class on the situation of the students they interviewed.

d. The teacher may also select two students to complete the dialogue in front of the whole class.

4. Role-playing (Hearing about the activity)

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully perform a dialogue using what they have learned in this lesson. (2) Method: a. Explain the activity method and remind students of the key points of each role. b. Students work in pairs to discuss how to present the dialogue. If time is limited, students can prepare at home and return next week. Come and perform.

c. After the students' performance, the teacher corrects their grammar and pronunciation errors and offers encouragement.

d. Students are encouraged to write down the dialogue as a writing exercise.

5. Reading Real-World Text (1)

Objective: Students will be able to use what they have learned to guess the meaning of the words used in the advertisement. (2) Method: Students will read the text on their own first, and then answer the questions. The teacher does not need to explain any unfamiliar words beforehand; students will use known clues to guess the content. (3)

The training focuses on phrases such as "sharing day," "two identical cups," and "limited time," and "hot or cold." The teacher can then add further explanations regarding terms such as "on the day," "taste," "sharing," and "entertainment."

Machine Translated by Google

VI. Supplementary Teaching of the Text

1. The teacher presents various scenarios and asks students to respond using the phrase "Although...but...". The teacher can ask questions or assign homework where students look at the questions and answer them. Example:

teacher	student
The weather is very cold	Although..., but...
The chocolate is delicious
Eating at a restaurant is expensive
Many people enjoy drinking beer.
My friend said the white coat looks better.

2. Depending on the situation, the teacher may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises. The teacher may read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or the teacher may create handouts to train reading skills.

Lisa and Gao Liya went shopping together on the weekend. Lisa wanted to buy a pair of trousers, while Gao Liya wanted to buy a sweatshirt for her husband. Lisa saw a small-sized pair of black trousers that looked great, and Gao Liya asked her to try them on. Because Lisa had recently gained weight, she needed a medium size, but the store didn't have any medium-sized trousers, so Lisa didn't buy anything. Gao Liya bought her husband a sweatshirt and a pair of trousers, which cost a total of 115 yuan. She paid by card.

Is the following statement correct?

(1. Lisa wants to buy trousers and also a sweatshirt.

(2. Because the small size trousers were too small, Lisa couldn't wear them.

(3. Lisa didn't buy trousers. 4.

(Goria paid for her clothes in cash.

Lesson Six

We're moving next month.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Moving. After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. State directions and locations in Chinese. 2. State the distance between two places. 3. Describe the facilities near your home.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity

Method: Take out a local map and mark several places you often visit, such as: supermarket, swimming pool, park, coffee shop, restaurant, etc. Start by asking "What's near your home?" to introduce the word "nearby" and the facilities in the living environment of this lesson.

2. Introduce the lesson topic with questions like "Do you like where you live now?" and "Do you want to move?" Students are free to express their opinions in their native language.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. The new words in this lesson are "South District" and "East District". Students are expected to learn the directional words "East, South, West, and North". The teacher can also supplement with "West District" and "North District".

2. Since students have already learned "where" and "here," and this lesson introduces "there," the teacher can review all three words together to ensure students use them correctly and can clearly say "where" and "there," avoiding misunderstandings. For example: The teacher asks, "Where do you live?" The student answers, "I live in..." The teacher then asks, "How is it there?" The student answers, "There..."

Machine Translated by Google

3. "Far" and "near" are key vocabulary words in this lesson. Practicing them with the grammatical structure "from...to..." is relatively easy. 4. "Move" and "Move to" are key new words in this lesson. Because "move" is a verb-object structure (separable verb), it can mean "moved house" or "moved once." "Move to" means "moved from place A to place B." When practicing, the teacher should first ask, "Do you want to move?" and then follow up with, "Where do you want to move to?" Asking these questions sequentially helps students avoid the mistake of saying, "I want to move to XX."

5. "Driving" and "walking" are verb-object structures (separable verbs) that express modes of transportation. When using them, first practice "driving" and "walking" as a single mode of transportation, then practice "driving" and "walking" as separate verbs with time added. For example, "I drive, he walks," and then practice expressing them in the way that "I drive (+ time), he walks (+ time)."

6. "Buying groceries, walking, and swimming" are all verb-object structures (separable verbs), and listing them in a phrase facilitates verb reduplication later. Used for various occasions, such as "buying groceries," "taking a walk," or "going swimming."

7. The previous lesson taught "how much," referring to quantity. This lesson teaches "how long," indicating the length of time. Teachers can review the old concepts first, then practice the new ones.

8. Words expressing time, such as "hour" and "minute," can be practiced together with grammar exercises.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. Separation

(1) To express the distance between two places, the structure is "Place A + distance + Place B + very/extremely/truly + "Far/Near".

(2) The teacher selects two locations, trying to use locations familiar to the local students for practice. Then, the teacher uses the example of "A is very far from B". "Is it far?" The teacher kept asking questions, and the students answered according to grammatical structures.

(3) In this lesson, "ÿ" is used to describe geographical distance, but it can also express temporal distance. The teacher should consider the students' understanding. The decision on whether to add time for practice depends on the situation.

2. From…to…

(1) This lesson teaches how to express "from A to B, ...", and the following sentence should explain "from place A to place B". How will it go? In what way? How long will it take? and other similar questions.

(2) When the teacher practices, continue practicing with the map from Grammar 1. For example: "How long does it take to walk from A to B? / How long does it take to drive? / Can we walk there?" Repeat this sentence pattern until the students are proficient.

(3) This lesson only teaches the usage between two locations. The teacher can decide whether to add the usage of "from time A to time B" depending on the students' level.

3. Time- Duration

(1) This grammar point expresses the duration of an action after a verb is performed. (2) If the verb does not have an object, the duration is directly following the verb: "Subj. + Verb + Duration". For example: I'm going on a trip for a month. If the verb is followed by an object (separable verb), the verb must be repeated once: "Subj. + Verb + Obj. + Verb + Duration". For example: I drive for an hour.

Machine Translated by Google

(3) The teacher designed different locations, distances, and different ways of moving to practice the time spent.

4. N of V/VP (Noun Modifier) (1) Grammar: "N of V/VP" indicates that the clause (phrase) can be used to modify the noun. For example: "I live (V)"

Place (N). / People who know Mr. Wang (VP) (N)".

(2) The teacher uses two sentences to practice, where one sentence modifies the other noun (subject), and the noun in both clauses is the same. For example: "1. My wife made a cake (N). 2. The cake (N) was delicious." The teacher first asks, "Was the cake delicious?" and then asks, "Who made the cake that was delicious?" The student answers, "My wife made a cake that was delicious." Note that the word "ÿ" should not be omitted. If it is said as "My wife made a cake that was delicious," the two sentences have different meanings.

(3) Modifiers in Chinese sentences can be added to the left to lengthen the sentence. For example: "the person who knows Mr. Wang" and "the person I am talking about who knows Mr. Wang".

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson)

1. I heard you're moving next month?

2. It's too far from the company.

3. Where are you moving to? 4.

I'm moving from the South District to the East

District. 5. How long will it take you to drive from there to the company?

6. It only takes fifteen minutes by car.

7. There are two supermarkets nearby.

Recommended process

1. The teacher, acting as both Gao Liya and Kevin (new characters in this lesson), reads sentences from the text. Students listen to the text first. Sentences for the lesson. The teacher can speak while showing pictures of new words or key sentences.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into two parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to limit the amount of information students encounter initially, focusing on two or three sentences from each part. During teaching, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Divide the text of this lesson into two parts:

Part One of the Text:

Kevin: I heard you're moving next month?

Gao Liya: Yes, I live in the South District now, which is too far from the company.

Kevin: Where are you moving to?

Gao Liya: I'm moving from the South District to the East District, near the City Park, which is closer to the company.

Kevin: How long does it take you to drive from there to the company?

Goria: It only takes fifteen minutes by car.

Kevin: Great, it's very close to the company.

Part Two of the Text:

Gao Liya: There are two supermarkets nearby, so it's very convenient to buy groceries. Kevin:

Does your husband like it there too?

Gao Liya: I love it. There's a big swimming pool there, and since my husband loves swimming, he can go swimming every day after we moved there.

Kevin: The East District is nice. My current place is far from the company, and I'd like to move to the East District as well.

Gao Liya: You're welcome to come over to my house after I move.

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar. (3) Have students practice vocabulary and grammar and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook. (4) Use the materials you have already learned to do extended exercises. (5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using the key sentences in this section by asking questions.

5. Key points of the first part of the text, new vocabulary: moving, A is too far from B, moving from A to B, East District, South District.

How long does it take to drive?

(1) The teacher uses the contextual picture or integrated activity map from before the text, marking the time. The teacher then displays the map to the students. First, the teacher asks, "Is Gao Liya's home far from the company?" The students answer, "Far/Not far/Near." The teacher then asks, "Where is Gao Liya moving from the South District?" and "How long does it take to drive from Gao Liya's home to the company?" The students answer, "Gao Liya is moving from the South District to the East District," and "It takes her fifteen minutes to drive." The teacher adds other locations (restaurants, schools, banks, coffee shops, etc.) to the map and then asks the students, "How long does it take to drive/walk from A to B?"

(2) The teacher asks the students using the same sentence structure, "Where do you live/How far is your home from the school?" "From your home to..." How long does it take to get to school by car/on foot? Repeat until you are familiar with it.

(3) The teacher asks questions such as "Do you want to move? Where would you like to move to? Why?" to extend the discussion to the students' real-life experiences. experience.

Machine Translated by Google

6. The second part of the text will also be conducted in this process and manner.

7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) When is Gao Liya going to move?

(2) Why did Gao Liya move to the East District? (3) After Gao Liya moved, was her new place far from her company? (4) After Gao Liya moved, how long would it take her to drive to her company? (5) What's near Gao Liya's new home? (6) Does Gao Liya's husband like moving? Why? (7) Does Kevin want to move? Why? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (Information questions, allowing students to freely express their experiences and opinions)

(8) If you were to move, where would you like to move to? (9) Are there supermarkets or swimming pools near your home? What else is near your home? (10) Where would you most like to live? Why? (11) How far is it from your current home to school/company by car? How long does it take to drive there? (12) Is it convenient to eat and exercise where you currently live? Are these places within walking distance?

8. Have students practice reciting the text in groups, then have students take turns reciting the text individually, and correct their pronunciation. 9. Have students practice narrating the content of the text to enable them to retell the key points of the text in a storytelling manner.

In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Integrated Activities 1. Reading and

Recognizing the Text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly...

Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after recitation, understand the content of the dialogue, and use Chinese characters or spelling.

Write out the missing parts using phonetic transcription.

(2) Method: a. Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

Machine Translated by Google

c. Write Chinese characters or pinyin, depending on the student's level.

d. Students learn quickly and at a high level, so teachers can create additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be practiced.

3. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to use what they have learned in this lesson to say the distance marked on the map and the time it takes to travel.

(2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind students of the vocabulary and sentences to be used. b.

Have students ask each other questions, allowing them to freely choose two destinations to ask each other.

c. The teacher must listen in on the students' questions and answers to ensure they are correct.

d. After all the questions and answers are completed, the teacher can ask two students to repeat the dialogue in front of the whole class.

4. Reading and listening activities

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully use the map reading skills learned in this lesson and explain the reasons for moving. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity plan. Read the map first before deciding whether you want to move.

b. If time is limited, students can prepare at home and report back next week. c. Students are encouraged to write down their reasons; this serves as a writing exercise.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials : Teachers

may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Kevin currently lives near a city park, close to restaurants, cafes, a swimming pool, and a supermarket. It's very convenient for him to buy groceries, eat, and exercise. Although the place is convenient, it's far from his company; it takes Kevin an hour to drive there, so he's tired every day. Recently, Kevin heard that Gao Liya is moving next month, and he's thinking of moving too.

Is the following statement correct?

(1. There is a park and a swimming pool near Kevin's house.

(2. Kevin's current place is inconvenient. 3. The company is not far (from Kevin's home, only an hour's drive away. 4. Although Kevin's home is far from the company, (he doesn't want to move.

Cultural Unit (II)

How are Chinese food and drinks named?

Everyone has a name, and so do Chinese foods and drinks. How do these names come about? There are many ways to name food. The most common is to name it directly after the ingredients and flavor, such as sweet and sour pork, a dish made with pork with a sweet and sour taste. Some are named after cooking methods, such as braised fish and fried chicken legs. "Braised" and "fried" are both cooking methods. Others are named after places, such as Wanluan pig's feet from Pingtung and Peking duck.

Besides direct naming, some dishes are named using association. A common method is naming them after famous people, such as General Tso's Chicken, after a Qing Dynasty general named "General Tso." Others are named after the shape of the food, such as Lion's Head, which is made of pork meatballs braised with cabbage; the meatballs resemble a lion's head, and the cabbage resembles a lion's mane.

Dishes served at wedding banquets are often named using auspicious idioms or proverbs, such as "May you have a son soon," a sweet soup made with red dates, peanuts, longan, and lotus seeds.

The most famous Taiwanese beverage, "bubble tea," gets its name from its shape. The "pearls" in bubble tea are small, round, black things made from sweet potato starch or cassava starch, which look like pearls. Beverage shop owners put them in sweet milk tea, and customers found it delicious, so the owners named it "bubble tea."

Lesson 7

The supermarket is next to the swimming pool.

I. Learning Objectives

Subject: Home Environment

After completing this lesson, you will be able to:

1. Describe the location of a place in Chinese. 2. Name the spaces within your home. 3. Describe the environment and facilities near your home.

II . Teaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity

Method: This lesson continues from the previous lesson, focusing on the home environment. The teacher will first review the content of "Golia Moving House", such as: Where did she move to? Why did she move? What is near her new home? Then, the teacher will introduce the more specific home environment of this lesson.

2. Prepare a picture of a house, including upstairs, downstairs, and front and back yards. Then ask students if it resembles their own home. Alternatively, ask students to draw a floor plan of their own house and then briefly describe it, using their native language.

3. Use the question "Is your living room/kitchen upstairs or downstairs?" to introduce the topic, including the living room, bedroom, and kitchen. Bathrooms, etc.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. The focus of the new vocabulary in this lesson is on locative words, including "front, back, inside, outside, above, below, opposite, left, right," etc. The teacher should practice using the relative positions of two objects. For example, take a cardboard box and a dog toy, and then practice "the dog is inside, outside, above, and below the box."

Machine Translated by Google

2. Find three students and have them stand in a row, with student A in the middle as the center point. Practice having student B in front of student A, and student C... After A.

3. Find a picture with a road in the middle. There's a coffee shop on one side and a restaurant on the other. The teacher says things like, "The coffee shop is opposite the restaurant," "The coffee shop is next to/to the left of the supermarket," and "The coffee shop is to the right of the bank," to help students understand how to describe the locations between different places.

4. Use the above methods to help students pronounce the directional words correctly until they are fluent. This lesson only teaches the expression "A is next to B + direction (next to)". The expression "A has B next to A" will not be introduced yet to avoid student confusion. 5. The rooms in the house are also a focus of this lesson. Use pictures to show the locations of "living room, bedroom, kitchen, and bathroom". Add the exercise "XX is upstairs, XX is downstairs".

6. This lesson uses the terms "house" and "room." The teacher can briefly explain the differences between them. These two terms appear in this book because they have a wide range of usage. "House" can represent all houses; only when further subdivided are terms like "building," "apartment," and "bunker house" used. Both "bedroom" and "study" can be considered "rooms." We often say "bathroom" including the toilet; if the local terminology (understanding) differs, the teacher can add the term "toilet" as appropriate.

7. The teacher can give examples of when Chinese people use "ÿÿ" (congratulations), and also mention that it can be used during the Chinese New Year.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. 2. Locative words / locative phrases

(1) Locative words are divided into three levels. The first level (grammar 1-1) consists of simple locative words, such as "inside," "outside," "above," "below," "left," "side," etc. Students need to memorize the meanings of these words.

(2) The second level (grammar 1-2) adds a noun to form a locative phrase, with the structure "noun + (of) + location" (N (Place Word/ Reference Point) + (of) + Positional Word = Locative Phrase). For example: next to the school, outside the house. "of" can be omitted. (3) The third level (grammar 2) uses "at" to express a precise location, with the structure "N + at + locative phrase" (N (Place Word) + at + Locative Phrase (N + of + Positional word)). For example: the supermarket is next to my house.

(4) Because the usage of locative words in Chinese differs from that in many languages, it is recommended that teachers build students' Chinese locative vocabulary layer by layer. The concept of locative words can help avoid errors.

(5) When using "N + in + locative phrase (place)" to indicate location, if "place" is a general noun and not a locative word, the phrase must be followed by a locative word to express the location. For example: "I am inside the house." "House" is a general noun, and "inside" is added to indicate the location. A common student error is "*I am in the house (I am in the house)".

3. Approximate number

"ÿ" (1) "ÿ" in this lesson indicates an indefinite number. It must be used with a measure word. For example: a few cups of coffee (2-9 cups), a dozen students (11-19), thirty-odd yuan (31-39), several tens of minutes (21-99).

(2) The teacher lists many numbers + nouns and asks students to practice them repeatedly. For example, the exercises in the textbook.

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The following points are the key learning points of this lesson) 1. Welcome to my home, please come in. 2. Congratulations on moving to your new home! This is a gift for you, I hope you like it. 3. You're too kind. 4. Please introduce yourself to us.

5. This house has a living room and kitchen downstairs/upstairs.

6. The swimming pool is not far from my home, just a few minutes' walk. 7. The supermarket is next to the swimming pool.

Recommended process

1. The teacher speaks sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Gao Liya, He Xi, Kevin, and Lisa. Students listen to the sentences first. The teacher can display pictures of new words or key sentences while speaking.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have the students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help them understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into two parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to limit the amount of information students encounter initially, focusing on two or three sentences from each part. During teaching, the teacher first presents the first part of the dialogue, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

4. Divide the text of this lesson into two parts:

Part One of the Text:

Gao Liya: Welcome! Welcome to my home, please come in. Lisa: He Xi, long time no see. Congratulations on moving to your new home! This is a gift for you, I hope you like it. He Xi: Thank you, you're too kind. Gao Liya: Please come to the living room for fruit and snacks.

Part Two of the Text:

Kevin: Goria, your house is so big and beautiful, tell us about it. Gao Liya: Okay. There's a living room and kitchen downstairs, and three bedrooms and a bathroom upstairs. Kevin: Is the swimming pool He Xi frequents far from your house? He Xi: Not far, it's behind my house, just a few minutes' walk. There's a big park across from my house, I often go for walks there. Lisa: Where is the supermarket?

Machine Translated by Google

Gao Liya: It's right next to the swimming pool. When He Xi goes swimming, I go grocery shopping. It's very convenient. Kevin: It's so convenient to live here. I want to move here too.

Gao Liya: The weather is so nice today, let's go for a walk outside this afternoon!

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar. (3) Have students practice vocabulary and grammar and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

(4) Use the materials you have already learned to do extended exercises. (5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using the key sentences in this section by asking questions.

5. The first part of the text focuses on teaching students how to give gifts and polite greetings when visiting someone's home. Key vocabulary: welcome, please come in, congratulations, polite, hope.

The teacher designs several social scenarios, such as congratulating someone on moving, congratulating someone on buying a new house, visiting an elder's home, and congratulating someone on finding a new job. Students use vocabulary from this section to engage in these scenarios, enabling them to use these socially appropriate phrases to communicate with others. For example, a guest should say, "Congratulations..." or "This is a gift for you; I hope you like it." The host should say, "Welcome, please come in," or "You're too kind." Role-playing is recommended.

6. The second part of the text is presented with pictures.

(1) A floor plan of a house is used, with upstairs and downstairs. The teacher asks questions according to the text, "Goliya's house..." What's upstairs? What's downstairs? (Please ask the students to answer.)

(2) Use a community map to mark the houses mentioned in the text, and then use questions to illustrate the text content. For example, questions such as "Is the swimming pool He Xi frequents far from his home?", "Where is the park?", and "Where is the supermarket?" can help build a concept of the larger environment. 7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) Did Lisa and Kevin bring a gift when they went to Gao Liya's house? (2) What did Gao Liya say when she saw the gift? (3) What did Gao Liya invite Lisa and Kevin to the living room for? (4) What did Kevin think of Gao Liya's house? (5) What's upstairs in Gao Liya's house? What's downstairs? (6) Is the swimming pool that He Xi frequents far from his house?

(7) What's across from He Xi's house? (8) Where is the supermarket?

(9) Why did Gao Liya say that living here is convenient?

(10) Does Kevin want to move? (11) What does Gao Liya say we can do this afternoon?

Machine Translated by Google

Please answer the following questions based on your own situation: (Information questions, allowing students to freely express their experiences and opinions) (12) Please tell us about your home. Is the living room big? How many rooms are there? How many bathrooms are there? (13) Is your kitchen big? Do you like to cook in the kitchen? (14) What is next to/opposite/behind your house?

(15) Is there a park near your home? Do you like to go for walks outside?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it aloud individually in turns, correcting their pronunciation. 9. Have students practice retelling the text, aiming to enable them to summarize the key points of the text as a story.

In addition to dialogue, monologue-style narration can also be developed.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Reading aloud and recognizing the text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly...

Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Method: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups.

b. The teacher selects students to read the dialogue aloud in turn.

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to memorize the sentences learned in this lesson after recitation, understand the content of the dialogue, and use Chinese characters or spelling.

Write out the missing parts using phonetic transcription.

(2) Method: a. Have students fill in the dialogue content.

b. The teacher calls on a student and reads out or writes down the answer.

c. Writing Chinese characters or pinyin can be arranged according to the students' level. d. If students learn quickly and at a high level, the teacher can make additional worksheets to increase the number of Chinese characters to be written.

3. I heard about the interactive activities.

(1) Objective: Students will be able to fluently use what they have learned in this lesson to describe the location of targets on a map. (2)

Method:

a. Explain the activity format and remind students of the vocabulary and sentences to be used. b.

Have students ask each other questions, with student A asking, "Where is (the person/place)?" and student B answering.

"(The person/place) is (in/on).

c. The teacher must listen in on the students' questions and answers to ensure they are correct.

d. After all the questions and answers are completed, the teacher can ask two students to repeat the dialogue in front of the whole class.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Writing and listening/speaking activities

(1) Objective: Students will be able to skillfully use what they have learned in this lesson to introduce their own houses to others. (2) Method:

a. Explain the activity format. First, draw a map of your home, then report it. If time is limited, you can go home to prepare.

b. Encourage students to write down their house first, and then verbally introduce it to others.

VI. Supplementary Teaching Materials :

Teachers may use the following materials as supplementary reading or listening exercises, depending on the situation. Teachers can read the dialogues aloud to train students' listening skills, or they can create handouts to train reading comprehension.

Goria moved to the East Side. Last weekend, Kevin and Lisa went to Goria's new house. They bought kitchenware as a gift for her. Kevin thought Goria's house was big and beautiful, with a large park across the street and a small swimming pool in it. Because Kevin enjoys walking and swimming, he felt that living in Goria's house was a great choice.
Asia's community is so convenient.

Is the following statement correct?

( ) 1. Kevin bought kitchenware for Lisa. ( ) 2. There is a park and a swimming pool near Gao Liya's house. ( ) 3. Gao Liya's husband likes to take walks. ( ) 4. Kevin thinks Gao Liya's new house is very convenient.

Lesson 8

A Day in the Life of Goria

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Daily Life

After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1. Describe your daily routine in Chinese. 2. State the sequence of events.

3. Describe your daily habits.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activity 1. Activity

Method: The teacher creates a daily schedule (based on the teacher's own daily routine) and then narrates it to the students. For example: wake up at X o'clock, eat breakfast at X o'clock, leave at X o'clock, rest at X o'clock at noon, etc.

Let's proceed with the events in chronological order.

2. Continue by introducing phrases like, "After getting up in the morning, I wash my hair and take a shower," and "After eating breakfast, I go to work," in that order. It expresses the continuity of time and action.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1.

This lesson includes nouns related to eating and food such as "breakfast, egg, juice, hamburger, cola, and ice cream." The teacher reviews the previously learned "dinner" and may add "lunch/afternoon" for practice as needed. The teacher practices these new words by asking questions such as "What did you eat for breakfast today? / What did you eat for dinner yesterday? / What did you eat for lunch today?" If students have other food names they want to know, the teacher can provide them.

2. This lesson contains many verb-object phrases (separable verbs) such as "get up," "wash hair," "take a bath," and "read." Because "hair" can be used alone, it is listed as a separate vocabulary word. The other words will be taught as whole words initially.

Machine Translated by Google

Then, practice the usage of verb reduplication in conjunction with the grammar exercises in this lesson. For example: take a bath; read a book. Verb reduplication is not applicable to "get up" because "get up" is a one-time action and cannot be continuous or repeated.

3. "Going to work" and "getting off work" are also verb-object phrases (separable words). The verb "down" can be followed by "le", such as: After getting off work. However, because it is a one-time action, it cannot be used repeatedly (e.g., *down-down-work). Therefore, it is placed in the general vocabulary section, and the teacher will practice it as a whole word.

4. The new vocabulary word "leave" in this lesson means to leave a place, such as leaving the company or leaving home. The previously learned word "go out" also means "leave home," but "go out" specifically means "leave through the door of the house," limiting its use to "leaving home. " It is incorrect to say "*go out to the company." 5. "First" and "then" are grammatical patterns used in this lesson; practicing them together is easier. If students are at a higher level, they can...

Practice the two words separately. For example: You go eat first, I need to take a shower first, etc.

6. The words “ÿ” and “ÿÿ” have different meanings. “ÿ” means “this building”, “building”, or “house”. “ÿÿ” is the bottom floor of a building. If it is an apartment building, there may be a second floor and a third floor. Students may make the mistake of saying “ÿÿÿÿ” due to the influence of their native language.

III. Grammar Teaching

1. First..., then...

(1) This sentence pattern indicates the sequence of two things/actions. For example: I take a shower first, and then I make dinner. (2) When practicing, the teacher prepares many things/actions, and then asks the students to choose two things/verbs and then apply them to this sentence pattern until they are proficient.

2. Particle completed (indicating action completed)

In this lesson, "ÿ" indicates that a task/action has been completed. This lesson has three possible structures.

2-1 "S + V + O + ÿ". This indicates that the action has been completed, and "ÿ" is placed at the end of the sentence. For example: I ate breakfast.

2-2 "S + V + ÿ + Num + M + O". "ÿ" is placed after the verb, followed by a numeral and a quantifier to modify the object. For example: I drank three bottles of beer.

2-3 "S + V1 + ÿ + O1, V2 + O2". "ÿ" is placed after the verb and before the object, indicating only the preceding clause. The meaning of this clause is incomplete; the content following it completes the sentence. For example: Every day after I eat breakfast, I drive to work. / Tomorrow after I eat breakfast, I will go to...

Watching a movie. ÿ Notes:

(a) "ÿ" before the second sentence indicates that the second action occurs immediately after the first action. (b) "ÿÿ" can follow the first sentence. (c) Both "ÿ" and "ÿÿ" can be omitted. Teaching Suggestions: Teachers should practice this grammar in tiers according to the three structures.

Start with the simplest structures and progress to complex sentences, repeatedly practicing with various verbs within sentence structures.

Machine Translated by Google

3. Verb reduplication

(1) When verbs are reduplicated, it indicates that the action is casual and easy to complete. When expressing a request or command, it has the effect of weakening the tone. For example: listen to music, go for a run.

(2) Overlapping structures can also be expressed as "V-V", such as: Listen to some music. The "-" can be omitted. Furthermore, in everyday spoken language, the omission of "ÿ" is a common occurrence.

(3) The teacher prepares some scenarios and asks students to answer naturally. For example: "Where did you go last weekend?" Students: "I stayed at home last weekend / I went to the park last weekend." The teacher then asks: "What did you do at home? / What did you do at the park?" Students are asked to answer with "I watched TV and listened to music at home... / I took a walk and played ball in the park."

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson) 1. After getting up, Gao Liya first takes a shower and washes her hair, and then eats breakfast.

2. After eating breakfast, I drove to work.

3. During her breaks, she often eats hamburgers in the company's first-floor restaurant.

4. Gao Liya first took the dog for a walk, which took about twenty minutes. 5. Gao Liya first took the dog for a walk, then went home to cook dinner. 6. After dinner, Gao Liya liked to listen to music and read a book.

Recommended process

1. Because this lesson is in chapter format, the teacher will narrate the text as if telling a story, using the character of Gao Liya, allowing students to listen to the lesson content first. The teacher can show pictures of new words or key sentences while narrating. 2. The teacher will lead the reading of the text, and the students will repeat it together. PPT slides, word cards, and pictures can be prepared to help understand the main idea of the entire lesson. 3. The lesson will be divided into two parts, each with independent dialogue and containing important new vocabulary and grammar. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, allowing them to focus on the sentences in each part. The teacher will first present the first part, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students will understand the meaning and be able to pronounce the sentences. Then, questions will be asked to allow students to repeatedly practice these key sentences.

4. Divide the text of this lesson into two parts:

Part One of the Text:

Gao Liya works at a mobile phone company with about thirty employees. She has several Taiwanese colleagues, and Gao Liya enjoys speaking Mandarin with them.

Machine Translated by Google

Gao Liya gets up at 6:30 in the morning. After getting up, she takes a shower and washes her hair, then eats breakfast. She usually eats an egg and drinks a glass of juice. After breakfast, she drives to work. During her lunch break, she often eats a hamburger and drinks cola in the company cafeteria on the first floor, and sometimes she also has an ice cream. She finishes work at 5:00 and leaves the office at 5:30.

Part Two of the Text:

After arriving home, Gao Liya first took the dog for a walk, which took about twenty minutes, before going home to cook dinner. Her husband, He Xi, often cooked with her. After dinner, Gao Liya liked to listen to music and read books. He Xi often watched movies online and played computer games.

Gao Liya's friends are coming over for dinner this Saturday, and she and He hope will have to prepare dinner together, so they will both be very busy this weekend.

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar. (3) Have students practice vocabulary and grammar and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook.

(4) Use the materials you have already learned to do extended exercises. (5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using the key sentences in this section by asking questions.

5. The first part of the text focuses on Gao Liya's schedule from when she gets up in the morning until she leaves the company at the end of the workday. Key vocabulary includes: sell, get up, wash hair, take a bath, eat breakfast (eggs, juice), eat a hamburger, drink cola, etc.

(1) The teacher made a table of the first part about Gao Liya's daily life, and cut out the key words in this section (replaced with blanks). Then, the students were asked to fill in the missing words while reading the text to complete the text. Students could just write the pinyin. Since they had already read the text aloud, they should be able to complete it based on their memory.

Examples are as follows:

Gao Liya works at a mobile phone company with about thirty employees. She has several Taiwanese colleagues, and Gao Liya enjoys speaking Mandarin with them. Gao Liya gets up at 6:30 AM, washes her hair, and then...

She usually eats a snack and drinks a beverage. After breakfast, she goes to work. During her lunch break, she often eats a burger and drinks cola at the company cafeteria, sometimes with an ice cream. She leaves the office at 5:30 PM.

(2) The teacher punctuated the grammar parts of the text (ÿ, ÿ, ÿÿ, ÿ) and asked the students to fill in the blanks while reading. Fill in the missing words.

(3) The teacher fills in the blanks for time-related words (~ o'clock, morning, noon, when, sometimes) and asks students to fill in the missing words while reading the text. 6. The second part of the text is also presented in the same way as the first paragraph.

Machine Translated by Google

7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) Where does Gao Liya work? (2) How many colleagues does Gao Liya have?

(3) Can Gao Liya speak Chinese at the company? (4) What time does Gao Liya get up? (5) What does Gao

Liya do after getting up? (6) What does Gao Liya eat for breakfast? (7) What does Gao Liya eat for lunch?

(8) What time does Gao Liya leave the company?

(9) What does Gao Liya do first after getting home? (10)

What does Gao Liya do after taking a walk? (11) What do Gao Liya and her husband do after dinner? (12) Who is coming to Gao Liya's house this weekend? (13) Why is Gao Liya so busy this weekend? Please answer

Lesson 9

I have a cold.

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Being Sick

After learning this lesson, you will be able to:

1. Describe the symptoms of a cold. 2. Understand the doctor's instructions. 3. Explain how to maintain good health.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: The teacher uses several pictures of illness and hospitals (headache, fever, doctor, hospital, medicine) to... Import the theme.

2. Discuss the topics of "How do we get sick?", "What do we do when we're sick?", and "What should we do if we don't want to get sick?". You are allowed to express your thoughts in your native language.

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1. This lesson contains many words related to illness, divided into two parts. The first part includes words like "cold," "sick," "doctor," "hospital," and "taking medicine." The second part relates to symptoms, such as "headache," "stomach ache," "cough," "fever," "runny nose," and "body." Use the vocabulary from the second part in the exercises in the first part. For example: "When you are sick, where on your body do you feel uncomfortable?" and "When you feel uncomfortable in a certain area, you will definitely go to the doctor?"

2. This lesson contains many verb-object phrases, such as "sick," "fever," "runny nose," and "take medicine." These phrases can be used with the particle "ÿ" inserted, as in "ÿÿÿ," "ÿÿÿ," and "ÿÿÿ." Depending on the students' level, this can be extended to "ÿÿÿÿ."

Machine Translated by Google

"Serious illness, high fever, took a lot of medicine / took X medicine". Avoid students saying "*seriously ill, *high fever".

3. Because "ÿ" and "ÿ" can be used alone and are frequently used, they are listed as new words. In addition to "headache" and "stomachache" in this lesson, they can be combined with other body parts in the future, such as "sore throat," "hand pain," and "leg pain." "ÿ" can also mean "sweat" and "tears."

4. We have already learned the conjunction "but," and the new word "but" in this lesson has the same usage; both are high-frequency words. 5. "Already" is often used to indicate that something has been completed or that the situation has changed, so it usually ends with "ÿ." For example: She has already left work; I have already eaten breakfast.

6. "Should" has two meanings: one is that it is logically necessary, such as: Students should study hard. The other is that it is estimated that a situation is bound to be this way, such as: The weather is so cold, it should snow tomorrow. This lesson uses the former meaning. 7. "What's wrong?" and "Much better" are presented as phrases in this lesson. Teachers will introduce how to use these phrases through contextual clues rather than analyzing grammar. For example, when you see someone looking unwell, unhappy, or in low spirits, you can ask, "What's wrong?" When someone asks how you are feeling or if you are feeling better, you can respond with "Much better."

III. Grammar Teaching

1. More

(1) In this lesson, “ÿ” is used as an adverb. “ÿ+V(O)” means to do something “more”. For example, “ÿ+V(O)” means to do something “less”.

(2) The structure is "more/less + V + (O)". For example: You should eat more vegetables and less meat. (3) "A little" can be added after the verb and before the noun. For example: I should watch less TV. (4) Students may make mistakes due to the influence of their mother tongue, such as: *Eat more vegetables.

2. No (have) (1) "No" is a negative marker. We have already learned "No + noun", such as: I don't have a brother, she has no money. (2) In this lesson, "No" is used to indicate that the action did not happen. Because it did not happen, "ÿ" cannot be used at the end of the sentence. (3) The most common mistake students make is "Teacher asks: Have you eaten? Student answers: *I haven't eaten."

Since "I haven't eaten" means "I haven't eaten," students should be reminded not to use the completed "ÿ" (le).

3. Again

(1) The adverb "ÿ" indicates the repetition of an action (state). For example: He came here this morning, and now he's here again. "ÿ" can be used to indicate the repetition of the verb/state of "coming". (2) Because it is a repetition of an action/state, "ÿ" is often added at the end of the sentence. For example: "I caught a cold again." "He played computer games last night, and he played them again this morning."

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson)

1. What's wrong with you?

2. I feel very uncomfortable.

3. My head hurts, and my stomach hurts a little too.

4. I have a runny nose, but I don't cough.

5. You should drink more water and get more rest.

6. Why didn't you come to work yesterday?

7. I'm sick again. 8. I'm much better now.

9. We should all exercise more.

Recommended process

1. The teacher speaks sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Gao Liya, Lisa, and the doctor. Students listen to the sentences first. The teacher can show pictures of new words or key sentences while speaking.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help students understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into two parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, allowing them to focus on the sentences in each part. During teaching, the teacher first presents the first part, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

4. Divide the text of this lesson into two parts:

Part One of the Text:

Gao Liya: Doctor, hello! Doctor: Gao Liya, what's wrong? Gao Liya: I felt very unwell after I woke up this morning. My head hurts, and my stomach hurts a little too. I don't want to eat anything. Doctor: Do you have a runny nose? Do you have a cough? Gao Liya: I have a runny nose, but I don't have a cough. Doctor: You don't have a fever either, let me take a look. (After examining Gao Liya) Doctor: You have a cold. Drink plenty of water and rest. You don't need any medicine.

Machine Translated by Google

Part Two of the Text:

Lisa: Why didn't you come to work yesterday? Gao Liya: I was sick again. Lisa: Did you see a doctor? Gao Liya: Yes. I went to the hospital near my house, and the doctor said I had a cold. Lisa: How are you feeling now? Gao Liya: Much better. I think health is so important; I need to exercise more and take care of myself. Lisa: Yes, exercise is very important; we should all exercise more. Gao Liya: So I plan to start going swimming with He Xi every day next week.

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display sentences and mark key vocabulary and grammar. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar. (3) Have students practice vocabulary and grammar and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook. (4) Use previously learned materials to do extended exercises.

(5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using key sentences in this section by asking questions about information.

5. The first part of the text focuses on Gao Liya feeling unwell after waking up in the morning and going to see a doctor. Key vocabulary: what's wrong, feeling unwell, headache, stomachache, runny nose, cough, fever, cold, rest more, drink more water, etc. (1) The teacher can use the picture of Gao Liya in the textbook, mark the parts of her discomfort on the picture, and then ask the students to say where Gao Liya feels unwell. For example: she has a headache, she has a stomachache, she has a runny nose, etc. (2) Ask two students to role-play, one as the doctor and the other as Gao Liya, and then practice the sentences in the text by asking and answering questions until they are familiar with them. Different students can be asked to perform on stage in turn.

6. The second part of the text follows the same structure as the first paragraph. This paragraph focuses on two questions. The first is, "Why didn't you come to work yesterday?" which leads to the following dialogue: "You were sick again, you went to see a doctor." The second is, "How are you feeling now?" which leads to sentences later in the text where Gao Liya and Lisa say things like, "Health is so important, we should exercise more, and we're planning to start swimming."

7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Example questions: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding) (1) Why did Gao Liya go to see a doctor? (2) Where does Gao Liya hurt?

(3) Does Gao Liya cough? Does she have a runny nose? Does she have a fever? (4) What did the doctor say was wrong with Gao Liya? (5) Does Gao Liya need to take medicine? (6) What did the doctor say Gao Liya should do? (7) Why didn't Gao Liya go to work yesterday?

(8) Where did Gao Liya go to see a doctor? (9) What does Lisa think she should do?

Machine Translated by Google

(10) What does Gao Liya plan to do in the future? Students are asked to answer the following questions based on their own situation: (Information questions to allow students to freely express their experiences and opinions) (11) If you are not feeling well, will you go to see a doctor? (12) If you have a headache, will you take medicine? (13) Do you think you need to see a doctor for a cold?

(14) What would you do if you caught a cold? (15) Do you think exercise is important? What kind of exercise do you usually do? (16) What do you think you should do to be healthy?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, and then have them read the text aloud individually in turn, while correcting their pronunciation.

9. Have students do narration exercises based on the text content, so that they can retell the key points of the text in a storytelling manner.

V. Comprehensive Activities

1. Reading aloud and recognizing the text

(1) Objective: Students will be able to recognize Chinese characters and sentences in dialogues without the aid of phonetic symbols or pinyin, and correctly... Pronounce it correctly.

(2) Methods: a. Have students practice the dialogue in groups. b. Have the teacher call on students to take turns reading the dialogue aloud.

2. Fill in the blanks and write the text.

Lesson 10

Gao Liya wants to go to Taiwan

I. arning Objectives

Topic: Future Plans After completing this lesson, you will be able to: 1.

Describe what you are currently doing. 2.

Describe your future plans. 3. Share your experiences.

II . eaching Focus and Teaching Activity Design

I. Warm-up Activities 1. Activity

Method: Since this is the last lesson in this book, the teacher can start the conversation by asking, "What are your plans after learning this book?"

Then ask the students, "Do you still want to learn Chinese?" 2. This lesson focuses on future plans, so the teacher can ask about plans for the next few months. The teacher can ask, "What are your plans for this summer?"

"Plan?" Ask students to use the word "intention" from the previous lesson to say, "I intend to...?"

II. Vocabulary Teaching 1.

Students have learned the usage of "ÿ" as a preposition, "ÿ + place + VP". In this lesson, "ÿ" is directly followed by a phrasal verb to indicate that the action is in progress or happening. For example: "I am eating", "He has already gotten up and is now taking a shower".

2. Students have learned the use of "ÿ" (kuài) as a stative verb, such as in "ÿÿÿ" (chÿ dé kuài, eat very quickly) and "ÿÿÿÿ" (zÿu zÿu kuài, walk very quickly). In this lesson, "ÿ" will always be followed by "ÿ" (le), which is one of the uses of "ÿ". It means "an event/action is about to happen". It is best for the teacher to practice this using grammatical sentence patterns. 3. In this lesson, "ÿ" (guò) is an auxiliary word indicating "past experience," not a verb. The teacher does not need to explain the verb usage of "ÿ", such as in "ÿÿÿ" (guòshÿngrì, celebrate a birthday) or "ÿÿÿ" (guòmÿlù, cross the road), to avoid student confusion.

Machine Translated by Google

4. The two new words "ÿÿ" (jìhuà, plan) and "ÿÿ" (jìnjiàng, intend) have similar meanings but are different. In the previous lesson, we learned that "ÿÿ" is more often used as a verb, mainly in spoken responses. For example: "A: What are you going to do this weekend? B: I plan to…". "ÿÿ" can be used as both a verb and a noun. When asking questions, it's common to hear things like, "A: What are your plans after graduation? B: I plan to… / My plan is… / I plan to… / I want to do…", usually referring to long-term, more planned matters. Using "ÿÿ" in response is often a more immediate, spoken response. When "ÿ ÿ" is used as a noun, it often indicates an unfortunate or unforeseen situation that needs to be addressed. For example: "You suddenly resigned, what are your plans for the future?"

5. The words "vacation" and "holiday" in this lesson can be practiced together. For "vacation," practice as a verb first, with the teacher asking questions like, "When do you want to take a vacation? / What do you want to do during your vacation?" and then, "How many days is your vacation? Is it long?" "Friday" can be followed by "ÿ", for example: He took three days off.

6. In this lesson, "long" and "short" refer to time. These two high-frequency words can also be used to describe things, such as: long pants, short skirt, long hair, short hair, etc. The teacher will supplement as needed. 7. In this lesson, "find" is a verb. We will practice using "find a job" and "find something." "Find" is the verb "find" combined with the complement "to." Because the complement structure is grammatically complex, it will not be explained in detail in this lesson. The teacher will teach by saying "first look around," and then "find." For example: You were looking for a job last month, have you found one yet? The affirmative answer is "I found one," and the negative answer is "I didn't find one."

III. Grammar Teaching 1. "ÿ" + VP

(1) "ÿ" is placed before a phrasal verb to indicate that the action is in progress. (2) Grammatical structure: "S + ÿ + VP + (ÿ)". For example: Gao Liya is cooking. "ÿ" can be added At the end of the sentence.

(3) The teacher shows pictures of the actions and asks the students to look at the pictures and say, "That person is doing...?"

2. Almost there...

(1) "ÿÿÿÿ……ÿ" indicates that a certain situation or event is about to happen. We have already learned "ÿ" for the completion of an action, but in Chinese, "ÿ" can also be used to indicate that an event has not yet happened (is about to happen).

(2) Grammatical structure: "(S) + soon + VP + finished". For example: He is about to return to Taiwan. (3) When the situation is clear, the subject can sometimes be omitted, such as: "A: Has he arrived home yet? B: He's almost there." or "It's about to rain."

(4) This grammar can be practiced by using two pictures with different contexts and time periods. For example: There is a picture of Gao Liya going to work, and another picture of six o'clock. Then the teacher says, "It's 5:45 now, has she finished get off work yet?" The student replies, "She hasn't finished get off work yet, but she'll be done soon."

3. If A is correct, then B is correct.

(1) "If A happens, then B happens" means that if A happens, then B happens.

Machine Translated by Google

(2) Grammatical structure: "S1 + ÿ + VP1, S2 + ÿ + VP2". For example: As soon as Mr. Wang got home, Mrs. Wang went out to buy things.

(3) If the subjects of the two clauses are the same, the subject of the second clause can be omitted. For example: As soon as I got home yesterday, I just watch TV.

(4) The teacher shows many pictures with actions and asks students to combine the pictures in practice. For example: "After eating breakfast..." + Going to work, getting up + taking a shower, getting off work + exercising, etc.

4. Pass

(1) "ÿ" is a verb particle indicating past experience. (2) Grammatical structure: "S + V + ÿ + O". For example: I have seen that movie. The negative is "S + ÿ + V + ÿ + O". For example: I have never studied Chinese. (3) Teachers practice this grammar by asking questions. The teacher asks: "Have you been to...? / Have you seen...? / Have you eaten...? / Have you drunk...?" Students can practice based on their life experiences. If students have no experience, they can practice using "I haven't V ÿ...".

IV. Text Teaching

Key sentences

(The bottom line is the key point of this lesson)

1. What are you doing? 2. I'm watching TV! 3. I'm graduating soon. 4. What are your plans after graduation?

5. I plan to go back to Taiwan to find a job as soon as I graduate.

6. Have you ever been to Asia?

7. I have only been to Japan, not Taiwan.

Recommended process

1. The teacher reads sentences from the text, taking on the roles of Gao Liya and Wang Mingwen respectively. Students listen to the sentences first. (Teacher...) You can speak while showing pictures of new words or key sentences.

2. Lead the class in reading the text aloud, and have students repeat it together. Prepare a PPT, vocabulary cards, and pictures to help students understand the main idea of the lesson. 3. Divide the text into two parts, each with independent dialogue and including important vocabulary and grammar. This is to avoid overwhelming students with too much information at once, allowing them to focus on the sentences in each part. During teaching, the teacher first presents the first part, introducing grammar and vocabulary. Through this dialogue, students understand the meaning and can also pronounce the sentences. Then, ask questions based on other information to encourage repeated practice of these key sentences.

Machine Translated by Google

4. Divide the text of this lesson into two parts:

Part One of the Text:

Mingwen: Hey, Gao Liya, long time no see. Are you home? What are you doing? Gao Liya: I'm watching TV!
Mingwen, how have you been lately? Mingwen: I'm graduating soon, and I'm writing my thesis. Gao Liya: Well, you must be very busy lately. What are your plans after graduation? Mingwen: I plan to go back to Taiwan to find a job as soon as I graduate. Gao Liya: I hope you can find a job you like.

Part Two of the Text:

Mingwen: What are your plans for summer? Gao Liya: I plan to take a vacation and travel abroad. Mingwen: Have you ever been to Asia? Would you like to visit Taiwan? I can take you to some interesting places. Gao Liya: That's a great opportunity! I've only been to Japan, never to Taiwan. Mingwen: If you have a long vacation, you could take Chinese classes in Taiwan.
Gao Liya: Not this summer, my vacation is only two weeks, too short. Mingwen: That's okay, you can come anytime after I return to Taiwan.

Teaching process for each part of the text:

(1) Display the sentences, highlighting key vocabulary and grammar points. (2) Briefly explain the points to note regarding vocabulary and grammar. (3) Have students practice the vocabulary and grammar, and complete the grammar exercises in the textbook. (4) Use previously learned materials for extended exercises. (5) Integrate the content of this section and practice using key sentences from this part through information-based questions.

5. The first part of the text focuses on Gao Liya's conversation with Wang Mingwen about their recent situations. Key vocabulary: ÿ + VP, ÿÿÿÿ (graduating soon), Writing papers, making plans, looking for jobs, etc.

(1) The teacher uses "What are they doing? (making a phone call)", "What is Gao Liya doing? (watching TV)", "What is Wang Mingwen doing now?
(writing a paper)" and "What are they talking about? (future plans)" to introduce the background situation and practice the usage of "zai".

(2) The teacher points to a student in the classroom and asks, "What is he doing?" The student answers with "He is...". (3) The teacher then asks, "Has Wang Mingwen graduated yet?" and "What are Wang Mingwen's plans after graduation?" to practice the usage of "almost..." and "as soon as...".

6. The second part of the text follows the same structure as the first paragraph. This section focuses on three questions. The first is "What are your plans?", leading to Gao Liya's later statement, "I plan to...". The second is "Have you ever been to...?", leading to Gao Liya's experience of traveling abroad.
The third sentence is, "If you..., I (then) can..."
"With...?" This leads to Wang Mingwen's suggestion to Gao Liya.

7. After reading the text aloud again, ask questions based on the text.

Machine Translated by Google

Example of a question: (Teaching questions, based on the textbook content, to check students' understanding)

(1) Who did Wang Mingwen call? (2) What was Gao

Liya doing when she answered the phone? (3) What has Wang Mingwen been busy with lately?

(4) Has Wang Mingwen graduated?

(5) What are Wang Mingwen's plans after graduation? (6) When does Gao

Liya take a vacation? (7) What does Gao Liya want to do during her vacation? (8) How long is Gao Liya's vacation? (9) Has Gao

Liya been to Asia? Which countries has she visited? (10)

Does Gao Liya want to go to Taiwan? (11) If Gao Liya goes to Taiwan, what will Wang

Mingwen do? (12) Will Gao Liya study Chinese in Taiwan? Why not? Please answer the following questions based on your own situation:

(Information questions, allowing students to freely express their experiences and opinions) (13)

What are your plans when you graduate from university? (14) What are your recent plans? (15) What will you do if you take a vacation? (16) Which countries have you visited? Which place do you like?

8. Have students practice reading the text aloud in groups, then have them read it aloud individually in turns, and correct their pronunciation. 9. Have students practice retelling the text to help them retell the key points of the text in a storytelling style.

Cultural Unit (III)

Leisure activities that Taiwanese people like

Taiwanese people enjoy many leisure activities, from which one can learn about Taiwanese culture and lifestyle. Generally speaking, popular leisure activities include visiting night markets, singing karaoke, and hiking.

A "night market" is a place where business only starts at night. Night markets are mostly run by small vendors, selling mostly snacks and drinks. Many people often visit night markets after school or work, grabbing dinner along the way. Besides snacks, you can also buy clothes, shoes, daily necessities, and more – truly a wide variety of goods.

In Taiwan, "KTV" is a place where everyone can sing together. Family, friends, and colleagues go to KTV to practice singing or listen to others sing when they have free time. Everyone sings and chats, creating a very joyful atmosphere. If you enjoy being in nature, you can go hiking. Taipei is a basin surrounded by mountains, which aren't very high and are easy to climb. Nearby Elephant Mountain and Battleship Rock are popular hiking spots, offering panoramic views of Taipei from the top.

Taipei also boasts a world-renowned museum—the National Palace Museum. If you'd like to see artifacts from thousands of years ago... If you want to appreciate calligraphy, painting, jade, or bronze artifacts, you absolutely must visit the Palace Museum.
